Club's Prepaid Legal Service Said Insurance

By WES ALBERS and LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writers

The State Insurance Department has told at least eight insurance companies they can't offer prepaid legal insurance in Nebraska until the necessary enabling legislation has been passed — perhaps during the next Unicameral session.

Meanwhile, a motor club, operating in Nebraska since Labor Day, is offering what a company executive vice president hesitatingly admits is prepaid legal service.

Rick Haney, executive vice president of Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., says the Insurance Department "could, if it took a notion, shut us down."

The Insurance Department agrees — but intends to let the corporation keep operating because it doesn't think it has the authority to regulate a motor club.

Service Or Insurance?

The question is whether the corporation offers a service or a form of insurance.

Roger Keetle, State Insurance Department attorney, said in Nebraska a motor club is a company which provides "services" rather than "insurance."

The legal distinction between the two "really isn't clear," he said. But it's important because insurance companies are regulated in Nebraska while motor clubs are not.

Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., is "toying on the verge of going into insurance," Keetle said.

Legal insurance is similar in concept to group medical insurance. For a fixed annual fee, policyholders are entitled to the services of an attorney. The company pays all or most of the attorney's fees.

Legal insurance is not a new concept. Germany has had it for 40 years. The United States has offered limited types of legal insurance, such as malpractice insurance or liability insurance, for some time.

An estimated 3,000-5,000 prepaid legal insurance plans are operating nationally, more than 380 in California alone.

Need Is 'Vast, Unmet'

Arguments for such plans focus on the "vast, unmet" need for legal services in this country.

Statistics indicate only about 30% of the population can afford legal counsel at the normal rate of $35 to $50 an hour. Roughly 10% can afford to hire attorneys and 20% are poor enough to qualify for government programs.

Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., is based in Ada, Okla., where it has operated for 2½ years as a motor club under Oklahoma's motor service club act ($3101) said Mike Duncan, the company's Nebraska representative.

In Oklahoma, newspaper stories and advertisements openly refer to the program, which is identical to that being offered in Nebraska, as prepaid legal service. But advertisements say: "This is not insurance in any form."

The Nebraska secretary of state's office certified the corporation on July 21 to operate in the state as a motor club. Haney said gaining certification as a motor club was "the only way we can operate (in the state) at this time."

In order to comply with $3101 in Oklahoma, the corporation is required to offer at least five common motor club services — such as wrecker, reservation, mapping and emergency road services — in addition to legal services, according to William McNeill, assistant Oklahoma insurance commissioner.

Single Offering In Nebraska

In Nebraska, the club only offers legal service benefits. For the annual group rate of $30, policyholders are entitled to legal representation for traffic citations, minor accidents, criminal charges, damage and personal injury claims as well as legal bonding up to $15,000 cash.

Mike Duncan, state representative for Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., said the club is offering its program mainly to groups, particularly school systems, and "we just don't have enough salesmen."

Membership is now available to Ralston, Bellevue, Sarpy County and Gretna school system employees on a payroll deduction plan, he said.

Keetle pointed out that the legal services the club offers are "nothing new. They've just chosen to emphasize this." Other motor clubs offer or have offered similar programs.

Barc Wade, an American Automobile Association spokesman, said that until a few months ago the Cornhusker Motor Club offered to pay legal fees for members appealing traffic violations. But "we had very few cases of this nature" and decided to drop it, he said.

He also said the club still offers to pay up to $500 legal fees for members accused of motor vehicle homicide or manslaughter. Since January, none of the club's 136,000 Nebraska members has used the service, he said.

Department 'Concerned'

Keetle said the State Insurance Department is "aware of" and "concerned about" the Professional Motor Service Club's activities in the state.

Since this company is legally a motor club — even though it "borders on" selling legal insurance — the department has no authority to regulate it, he said.

"This is a problem for us, it really is," he admitted.

Keetle said the department has drafted a bill which would allow insurance firms to peddle legal insurance in the state. The Nebraska Legal Insurance Act would "allow everyone to compete equally," he said.

When and if the act is passed by the Legislature, the Professional Motor Service Club will become subject to it. Keetle has decided. Meanwhile, it can do business in the state. Keetle said he has asked corporation officials to send him the same reports the Oklahoma Insurance Department receives.

Not Fair, INA Says

A spokesman for the Insurance Co. of North America (INA), one of the companies turned away from offering "group legal services" in Nebraska, said he doesn't think it's fair that insurance companies are regulated while motor clubs are not.

John Weaver, manager of group legal services at INA's Philadelphia home office, said insurance companies tend to be "the most solvent and least likely to go belly-up."

The State Insurance Department asked INA to withdraw its application for a legal insurance program in an October 1974 letter, he said.

INA's program, which covers all civil and criminal actions except minor motor vehicle actions, has been approved in 16 states, including Missouri and Colorado, Weaver said.

Sahara March Called Off

AGADIR, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II announced Sunday that his "March of Conquest" into the Spanish Sahara had "achieved its objective" and called on the 350,000 volunteers he dispatched to the neighboring territory to return to Morocco.

In exchange for the withdrawal of the marchers, the Spanish government was expected to announce its intention to transfer the administration of the colony to the United Nations, which U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim had proposed earlier as a temporary solution.

"From now on, my dear people, we must solve our problems in a different manner," the 44-year-old monarch said in a nationwide radio address on the fourth day of the unarmed invasion.

The king said he was returning Monday to his Marrakech palace to resume negotiations on the future of the disputed territory.

He said the volunteers who have set up camps along the border and just inside the Spanish territory would all be withdrawn to their base camp at Tarfaya on the Moroccan side of the border.

The king's 10-minute speech made no reference to his talks in Agadir Saturday with Spanish cabinet minister Antonio Carro Martinez, but Moroccan sources said the two reached an informal understanding. Spain, planning to give up the territory it colonized in 1884, favors a U.N.-administered referendum by the 80,000 inhabitants. Morocco claims the phosphate-rich northern part and Mauritania the southern and eastern portions.

Official Moroccan sources said the volunteers were camped in the Spanish Sahara in three main columns. One group was some six miles beyond the border south of Tarfaya, another group about 120 miles further east and the third — which entered Spanish territory Sunday morning — 30 miles from the Algerian border.

Before the king's speech, Spanish military officers in the territorial capital of El Aaiun said Spain had stationed a 16-ship task force about 100 miles off the Sahara and that Spanish troops were prepared to fall back about 10 miles from the Moroccans facing them across barbed wire and what Spaniards said was a minefield.

There were rumors in El Aaiun that the ships were standing by to evacuate the 15,000-

20,000 Spanish troops in the territory in the event of an agreement, but the vessels included a missile cruiser, six destroyers and attack transports with battle-ready marines.

Nor had it been clear whether the fallback in the desert was intended to set up a new showdown line or to allow Morocco to peacefully annex a few more miles.

"We are ready to do what we are instructed," a Spanish major in El Aaiun told newsmen. "If we have to fight, we will fight. If we are to leave the Sahara, we are ready to go."

King Hassan did not indicate whether the volunteers would return to their homes immediately after reaching the Tarfaya base camp, or whether they would remain temporarily in the area.

HUTTON . . . only one true Veterans Day.

Veteran Clearly Remembers Moment War Ended For Him

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — The faces were younger then. The tired lines were etched by the reality of the "War to end All Wars," not the years that have tumbled by since Armistice Day in 1918.

History has recorded the casualties, heroic battles and the eloquent words of statesmen. But only the expressions of the old soldiers can explain why Nov. 11 can be the only true Veterans Day for them.

"I remember we were throwing the big shells in all morning. They had me out directing traffic, and this lieutenant came up to me and said 'By golly, it's a little after 11, I don't think they signed it.'"

"Well sir, he hadn't much more than said it, and the shooting stopped just like that."

Three Elevens

That's how World War I ended on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month in 1918 in France for George Hutton, 89, a native of Gibbon.

There aren't as many World War I veterans around as there were 10 years ago when he moved into the Nebraska Veterans Home in Grand Island, Hutton said, and the young whippersnappers from World War II are starting to take things over.

"Last year they had a guy down here to speak on Veterans Day who went on about how long he had lived and about the big war — meaning World War II. Well, he never said a thing about our war. I sure hope that doesn't happen again this year," he said.

Congress changed Veterans Day to the fourth Monday in October as part of a federal uniform holiday bill in 1968. The Unicameral returned the official holiday in Nebraska to Nov. 11 in 1973.

Congress thought veteran opposition would wane with time, but it was forced this year to yield the three-day holiday. Effective in 1978, the federal holiday will return to the 11th.

All the fuss hasn't meant much to Hutton.

Only One Day

"Heck, I never celebrated it on any other day but that one anyway. That was our day — that was when the armistice was signed," he said.

The old corporal doesn't remember much about celebrating the victory in France, only getting back home.

"When we steamed back into New York Harbor and saw the Statue of Liberty, I remember saying: Old girl, if you want to see me again, you're going to have to turn around."

Most Americans have forgotten veterans and what Veterans Day means, the talkative Hutton said, and visitors to the home are few and far between.

George Hopwood, who has been in the home for 14 years, said he doesn't care much about visitors anymore.

Hobby Is Clocks

Hopwood's only hobby is the 25 broken clocks he got "from an old fellow we called the horse trader that died a while back."

He has repaired the clocks, which incessantly tick each day away in his small room. He has three special clocks to tell him when to go to each of his daily meals.

Fred Miller, formerly of Omaha, who served in the Pacific in World War II, said people don't celebrate Veterans Day like they did when he was a boy in Virginia.

"I'm glad they returned it to Nov. 11. Armistice Day is a victory day. People really celebrated being free back then. They appreciated what the armed services did to keep them free," he said. Many of his buddies spent most of Oct. 27 — the federal holiday — trying to figure why the day was marked in red on the calendar, he said.

Miller, who has been in the home for a year, said most of the men don't feel the state owes them a place to end their days on earth, but are grateful for it.

"They would have made out somehow, but it's nice to help them out. They've done their duty to protect their country, and there's no doubt serving in a war affected a lot of these guys," he said.

Miller said most veterans would relish the chance to share their experiences with anyone who would take the time to come to the home.

They Wouldn't Hesitate

The memories of war are fuzzier now, but the veterans agree they wouldn't hesitate to pull on the uniform of their country again.

But the wisdom of age has tempered their perspective on the glory of war. "I don't know as it really helps. I think they could get along without it. War never helped anyone. But I suppose there will always be countries with hard feelings that they never get over," Hutton said.

Ford Throws Down Gauntlet For Primaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford challenged Ronald Reagan and any other White House rivals Sunday to contest him in all of the 30 Republican presidential primary elections next year.

He said candidates owe it to the voters to do that rather than "entering some and ducking others."

Ford also acknowledged for the first time that disagreements and tension within the administration led to his decision to fire Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger a week ago.

He did so minutes after declaring again that policy disputes were not involved in his shakeup of top-echelon national security personnel.

The President answered questions in an hour-long appearance on the NBC program "Meet the Press." It marked the 28th anniversary of the television interview program.

Ford said that over the last month he had seen "a growing tension" building in his administration. He did not mention specific issues, but Schlesinger is known to have been sharply opposed to planned reductions in the next defense budget.

In addition, there have been repeated reports that the defense secretary had misgivings about administration accommodations with the Soviet Union in the name of détente.

The President said he thinks the changes he made will create a better atmosphere and help him do a better job.

Ford expressed his own concern about a projected $7 billion congressional cut in the current defense budget, but said it would be premature for him to threaten a veto.

On a foreign policy point, the President said there is little likelihood that strategic arms limitation negotiations will progress to the point that Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev will come to Washington for a summit and signing ceremony this year.

Ford said that isn't necessarily bad. "I want a good agreement rather than to be pressured into having an agreement by a precise date," he said.

With Reagan, the former California governor, planning to announce on Nov. 20 that he will challenge Ford for the GOP nomination next year, the President repeated that he intends to enter every presidential primary, which means at least 30 and probably 31.

Vermont is not now among the states having primaries but is expected to enact legislation for one.

"That doesn't mean I will campaign in every primary," he said.

Both time and money will preclude that. Ford said whatever campaigning he does will be secondary to meeting his responsibilities as President.

A new federal campaign law limits spending to $10 million, which isn't enough to finance active campaigns in all primary states.

But Ford said his name will be on the ballot everywhere, and that other candidates should be listed, too.

"I think candidates ought to present themselves to the people," Ford said. "They are the ones that should judge. And entering some and ducking others I don't think gives the people the options that they should have."

While Ford said candidates are obligated to present themselves to the voters, he vowed to remain in the contest next year even if the voters reject him in some primaries.

"... There will be no withdrawal by me," he said, vowing to be in the competition when the Republican National Convention opens in Kansas City next August.

Ford, describing himself as in the middle of the road with Reagan on the right, said he doesn't intend to criticize his presidential rival, but to sell his own record in 1976.

He said the economy will be improving, foreign policy is in good shape, and added another issue only he can cite:

"I honestly believe that there has been a restoration of credibility and confidence in the White House. That's something I don't believe that any other candidate can take away from me."

Ford conceded there have been problems in his campaign organization. "Frankly, it could be better," he said. But he said presidential performance will more than offset internal campaign difficulties.

Ford also said that he would be willing to have an independent, objective medical test instituted for all presidential candidates, and that he will consider ways to let the country know "earlier than the last minute" whom he wants as a vice presidential running mate next year.

Ford Final Interviewee For Spivak

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press" Sunday marked the final show for Lawrence G. Spivak, who began the long-running interview program on radio 30 years ago.

Spivak, 73, is retiring, and Ford concluded the broadcast by congratulating him "on behalf of all who have gone before me" in the 30 years of which 23 also have been on television.

Ford noted this was the seventh time he has been on "Meet the Press," declaring it's been a challenge, it's always been pleasant, and that he was deeply grateful for your understanding.

Spivak is being succeeded as moderator by NBC News Correspondent Bill Monroe.

Propane Blows Up After Freight Derails

FAIRLEE, Vt. (AP) — Propane gas in three tank cars exploded Sunday after a freight train derailed along the Connecticut River five miles south of Fairlee, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

About 100 firemen tried to contain the fire that followed the explosion. Authorities quickly sealed off the area and began evacuating persons from nearby houses.

The derailment occurred in an open area along the river which forms the boundary between New Hampshire and Vermont.

One witness said the blast "lit up the trees on the hillside" and others said the initial blast and secondary blasts could be heard for up to 10 miles.

Sgt. Dexter Pierce of the Fairlee Fire Department, said "at least three cars have exploded" and that firemen battled the fire under threat of secondary blasts.

He said another tank car was threatened. "A very bright flash lit up all the trees on the hillside with a reddish color. We looked to the north and huge billowing flames went hundreds of feet into the sky. Then a few seconds later there was a loud explosion," a witness said.

A state police spokeswoman said she did not know how many cars were involved in the derailment.

A dispatcher at the Fairlee police department said the blasts could be heard and felt as far as 10 miles away.

Hospital officials in Hanover said no one had been brought to the hospital as a result of the derailment.

Club's Prepaid Legal Service Said Insurance

By WES ALBERS and LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writers

The State Insurance Department has told at least eight insurance companies they can't offer prepaid legal insurance in Nebraska until the necessary enabling legislation has been passed — perhaps during the next Unicameral session.

Meanwhile, a motor club, operating in Nebraska since Labor Day, is offering what a company executive vice president hesitatingly admits is prepaid legal service.

Rick Haney, executive vice president of Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., says the Insurance Department "could, if it took a notion, shut us down."

The Insurance Department agrees — but intends to let the corporation keep operating because it doesn't think it has the authority to regulate a motor club.

Service Or Insurance?

The question is whether the corporation offers a service or a form of insurance.

Roger Keetle, State Insurance Department attorney, said in Nebraska a motor club is a company which provides "services" rather than "insurance."

The legal distinction between the two "really isn't clear," he said. But it's important because insurance companies are regulated in Nebraska while motor clubs are not.

Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., is "toying on the verge of going into insurance," Keetle said.

Legal insurance is similar in concept to group medical insurance. For a fixed annual fee, policyholders are entitled to the services of an attorney. The company pays all or most of the attorney's fees.

Legal insurance is not a new concept. Germany has had it for 40 years. The United States has offered limited types of legal insurance, such as malpractice insurance or liability insurance, for some time.

An estimated 3,000-5,000 prepaid legal insurance plans are operating nationally, more than 380 in California alone.

Need Is 'Vast, Unmet'

Arguments for such plans focus on the "vast, unmet" need for legal services in this country.

Statistics indicate only about 30% of the population can afford legal counsel at the normal rate of $35 to $50 an hour. Roughly 10% can afford to hire attorneys and 20% are poor enough to qualify for government programs.

Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., is based in Ada, Okla., where it has operated for 2½ years as a motor club under Oklahoma's motor service club act (S3101) said Mike Duncan, the company's Nebraska representative.

In Oklahoma, newspaper stories and advertisements openly refer to the program, which is identical to that being offered in Nebraska, as prepaid legal service. But advertisements say: "This is not insurance in any form."

The Nebraska secretary of state's office certified the corporation on July 21 to operate in the state as a motor club.

Haney said gaining certification as a motor club was "the only way we can operate (in the state) at this time."

In order to comply with S3101 in Oklahoma, the corporation is required to offer at least five common motor club services — such as wrecker, reservation, mapping and emergency road services — in addition to legal services, according to William McNeil, assistant Oklahoma insurance commissioner.

Single Offering In Nebraska

In Nebraska, the club only offers legal service benefits.

For the annual group rate of $30, policyholders are entitled to legal representation for traffic citations, minor accidents, criminal charges, damage and personal injury claims as well as legal bonding up to $15,000 cash.

Mike Duncan, state representative for Professional Motor Service Club, Inc., said the club is offering its program mainly to groups, particularly school systems, and "we just don't have enough salesmen."

Membership is now available to Ralston, Bellevue, Sarpy County and Gretna school system employees on a payroll deduction plan, he said.

Keetle pointed out that the legal services the club offers are "nothing new. They've just chosen to emphasize this." Other motor clubs offer or have offered similar programs.

Bare Wade, an American Automobile Association spokesman, said that until a few months ago the Cornhusker Motor Club offered to pay legal fees for members appealing traffic violations. But "we had very few cases of this nature" and decided to drop it, he said.

He also said the club still offers to pay up to $500 legal fees for members accused of motor vehicle homicide or manslaughter. Since January, none of the club's 136,000 Nebraska members has used the service, he said.

Department 'Concerned'

Keetle said the State Insurance Department is "aware of" and "concerned about" the Professional Motor Service Club's activities in the state.

Since this company is legally a motor club — even though it "borders on" selling legal insurance — the department has no authority to regulate it, he said.

"This is a problem for us, it really is," he admitted.

Keetle said the department has drafted a bill which would allow insurance firms to peddle legal insurance in the state. The Nebraska Legal Insurance Act would "allow everyone to compete equally," he said.

When and if the act is passed by the Legislature, the Professional Motor Service Club will become subject to it, Keetle has decided. Meanwhile, it can do business in the state. Keetle said he has asked corporation officials to send him the same reports the Oklahoma Insurance Department receives.

Not Fair, INA Says

A spokesman for the Insurance Co. of North America (INA), one of the companies turned away from offering "group legal services" in Nebraska, said he doesn't think it's fair that insurance companies are regulated while motor clubs are not.

John Weaver, manager of group legal services at INA's Philadelphia home office, said insurance companies tend to be "the most solvent and least likely to go belly-up."

The State Insurance Department asked INA to withdraw its application for a legal insurance program in an October 1974 letter, he said.

INA's program, which covers all civil and criminal actions except minor motor vehicle actions, has been approved in 16 states, including Missouri and Colorado, Weaver said.

Sahara March Called Off

AGADIR, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II announced Sunday that his "March of Conquest" into the Spanish Sahara had "achieved its objective" and called on the 350,000 volunteers he dispatched to the neighboring territory to return to Morocco.

In exchange for the withdrawal of the marchers, the Spanish government was expected to announce its intention to transfer the administration of the colony to the United Nations, which U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim had proposed earlier as a temporary solution.

The king said he was returning Monday to his Marrakech palace to resume negotiations on the future of the disputed territory.

He said the volunteers who have set up camps along the border and just inside the Spanish territory would all be withdrawn to their base camp at Tarfaya on the Moroccan side of the border.

The king's 10-minute speech made no reference to his talks in Agadir Saturday with Spanish cabinet minister Antonio Carro Martinez, but Moroccan sources said the two reached an informal understanding. Spain, planning to give up the territory it colonized in 1884, favors a U.N.-administered referendum by the 80,000 inhabitants. Morocco claims the phosphate-rich northern part and Mauritania the southern and eastern portions.

Official Moroccan sources said the volunteers were camped in the Spanish Sahara in three main columns. One group was some six miles beyond the border south of Tarfaya, another group about 120 miles further east and the third — which entered Spanish territory Sunday morning — 30 miles from the Algerian border.

Before the king's speech, Spanish military officers in the territorial capital of El Aaiun said Spain had stationed a 16-ship task force about 100 miles off the Sahara and that Spanish troops were prepared to fall back about 10 miles from the Moroccans facing them across barbed wire and what Spaniards said was a minefield.

There were rumors in El Aaiun that the ships were standing by to evacuate the 15,000-

Nor had it been clear whether the fallback in the desert was intended to set up a new showdown line or to allow Morocco to peacefully annex a few more miles.

"We are ready to do what we are instructed," a Spanish major in El Aaiun told newsmen. "If we have to fight, we will fight. If we are to leave the Sahara, we are ready to go."

King Hassan did not indicate whether the volunteers would return to their homes immediately after reaching the Tarfaya base camp, or whether they would remain temporarily in the area.

Veteran Clearly Remembers Moment War Ended For Him

Grand Island — The faces were younger then. The tired lines were etched by the reality of the "War to end All Wars," not the years that have tumbled by since Armistice Day in 1918.

History has recorded the casualties, heroic battles and the eloquent words of statesmen. But only the expressions of the old soldiers can explain why Nov. 11 can be the only true Veterans Day for them.

That's how World War I ended on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month in 1918 in France for George Hutton, 89, a native of Gibbon.

There aren't as many World War I veterans around as there were 10 years ago when he moved into the Nebraska Veterans Home in Grand Island, Hutton said, and the young whippersnappers from World War II are starting to take things over.

"Last year they had a guy down here to speak on Veterans Day who went on about how long he had lived and about the big war — meaning World War II. Well, he never said a thing about our war. I sure hope that doesn't happen again this year," he said.

Congress changed Veterans Day to the fourth Monday in October as part of a federal uniform holiday bill in 1968. The Unicameral returned the official holiday in Nebraska to Nov. 11 in 1973.

Congress thought veteran opposition would wane with time, but it was forced this year to yield the three-day holiday. Effective in 1978, the federal holiday will return to the 11th.

All the fuss hasn't meant much to Hutton.

George Hopwood, who has been in the home for 14 years, said he doesn't care much about visitors anymore.

"My main partners except for one couple are out at the cemetery," the 84-year-old World War I vet said. "I don't care to get any visitors. The kids these days don't believe what it was like back then anyway — especially in the Thirties."

Hobby Is Clocks

Hopwood's only hobby is the 25 broken clocks he got "from an old fellow we called the horse trader that died a while back."

He has repaired the clocks, which incessantly tick each day away in his small room. He has three special

In addition, there have been repeated reports that the defense secretary had misgivings about administration accommodations with the Soviet Union in the name of détente.

The President said he thinks the charges he made will create a better atmosphere and help him do a better job.

Ford expressed his own concern about a projected $7 billion congressional cut in the current defense budget, but said it would be premature for him to threaten a veto.

On a foreign policy point, the President said there is little likelihood that strategic arms limitation negotiations will progress to the point that Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev will come to Washington for a summit and signing ceremony this year.

Ford said that isn't necessarily bad. "I want a good agreement rather than to be pressured into having an agreement by a precise date," he said.

With Reagan, the former California governor, planning to announce on Nov. 20 that he will challenge Ford for the GOP nomination next year, the President repeated that he intends to enter every presidential primary, which means at least 30 and probably 31.

Vermont is not now among the states having primaries but is expected to enact legislation for one.

"That doesn't mean I will campaign in every primary," he said.

Both time and money will preclude that. Ford said whatever campaigning he does will be secondary to meeting his responsibilities as President.

And a new federal campaign law limits spending to $10 million, which isn't enough to finance active campaigns in all primary states.

But Ford said his name will be on the ballot everywhere, and that other candidates should be listed, too.

"I think candidates ought to present themselves to the people," Ford said. "They are the ones that should judge. And entering some and ducking others I don't think gives the people the options that they should have."

While Ford said candidates are obligated to present themselves to the voters, he vowed to remain in the contest next year even if the voters reject him in some primaries.

"... There will be no withdrawal by me," he said, vowing to be in the competition when the Republican National Convention opens in Kansas City next August.

Ford, describing himself as in the middle of the road with Reagan on the right, said he doesn't intend to criticize his presidential rival, but to sell his own record in 1976.

He said the economy will be improving, foreign policy is in good shape, and added another issue only he can cite:

"I honestly believe that there has been a restoration of credibility and confidence in the White House. That's something I don't believe that any other candidate can take away from me."

Ford conceded there have been problems in his campaign organization. "Frankly, it could be better," he said. But he said presidential performance will more than offset internal campaign difficulties.

Ford also said that he would be willing to have an independent, objective medical test instituted for all presidential candidates, and that he will consider ways to let the country know "earlier than the last minute" whom he wants as a vice presidential running mate next year.

Ford Final Interviewee For Spivak

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press" Sunday marked the final show for Lawrence G. Spivak, who began the long-running interview program on radio 30 years ago.

Spivak, 75, is retiring, and Ford concluded the broadcast by congratulating him "on behalf of all who have gone before me" in the 30 years, of which 28 also have been on television.

Ford noted this was the seventh time he has been on "Meet the Press," declaring "It's been a challenge, it's always been pleasant" and that he was "deeply grateful for your understanding."

Spivak is being succeeded as moderator by NBC News Correspondent Bill Monroe.

Rivals Stage Kidnap Spree

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Moslem and Christian gunmen set up roadblocks in Beirut Sunday and police reported 27 persons kidnaped on both sides in a new threat to the uneasy cease-fire.

Moslem leftists grabbed 16 persons in the Beirut suburb of Mazraa, and the Christian Phalangists retaliated by kidnaping 11 Moslems in the port district, police said.

An army patrol clashed with Christian militiamen of the Phalange party when they refused to remove a roadblock in the Hazmieyh suburb. A military communique said one army corporal was killed and another wounded. It mentioned no casualties on the Phalange side, but witnesses said three militiamen were killed in the shootout.

The soldiers were patrolling the Damascus-Beirut highway under government orders to open fire on any armed elements blocking traffic on major roads in Lebanon.

Security forces sped to the embattled suburbs and managed to disengage street gangs.

The rest of the capital was calm, Beirut radio reported.

A Lebanese-Palestinian security commission met in the evening to discuss fresh measures to consolidate the shaky, five-day-old cease-fire, the 12th in two months.

Lebanese were streaming back into the capital from mountain resorts while officials were broadcasting reassuring statements about security conditions in the civil war-scarred capital.

A Vatican delegation led by Cardinal Paulo Bertoli arrived on a peace-making mission on behalf of Pope Paul VI. The delegation is to approach influential Christian, Moslem and Palestinian guerrilla leaders to try to mediate a settlement between them.

Meanwhile, Premier Rashid Karami, a Moslem, and President Suleiman Franjeh and Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, both Christians, were locked in a bitter dispute over the unloading of an arms shipment Friday at a port north of Beirut.

The shipment was consigned to private Christian militias, and Karami complained the army failed to heed his orders to stop unloading and seize the ship.

Karami, who doubles as defense minister, demanded investigation into the unloading and punishment of the officers who disobeyed him. Chamoun threatened resignation if Karami persisted in his demands.

Chaos Curtails Premier's Speech

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Premier Jose de Azevedo was forced to cut short a speech condemning violence Sunday when a pro-government rally dissolved in a volley of tear gas grenades and gunshots.

The government television station reported four persons hospitalized for gas inhalation and the armed forces were on alert for the second straight day.

Wiping tears from his eyes after the gas grenades exploded, Azevedo left the speakers platform after asserting in a nationally broadcast speech that political clashes in the country threatened Portugal with a "suicidal return to primitivism."

Military policemen fired more than 100 submachine gun rounds into the air in three volleys while the demonstrators dispersed in scenes of panic. There was screaming and people fell on top of each other as they ran from the gas and gunfire. Azevedo was escorted from the area in an armored vehicle.

He had been addressing a pro-government crowd of about 20,000 for nearly an hour when banners caught on fire and tear gas grenades, possibly detonated by an opponent of the regime, went off.

Some in the crowd panicked and Azevedo shouted through the microphone, "Calm, please, calm, there is no danger!"

Shots were fired into the air by military policemen and Azevedo left the balcony overlooking the large open square at the edge of Lisbon's waterfront.

The military police fired when members of the crowd rushed them, using banner poles as battering rams. The crowd was apparently incensed because the military policemen were wearing gas masks. The MPs have a reputation for having leftist sympathies and were thought by some demonstrators to have thrown the gas grenades themselves.

The incident — at a rally that was meant to show the government's determination — illustrated instead the chaotic Portuguese political situation.

It came as Portugal's Communist Party again warned of the possibility of a right-wing coup and called on the Portuguese people to observe "three days of revolutionary vigilance."

The armed forces remained on indefinite alert.

The police fired into the air earlier in the day to break up a possible clash between leftists and a group of women marching in support of the government.

In his prepared text, Azevedo hit out at what he called impossible wage demands, wildcat strikes, unauthorized seizures of farmland and a lack of discipline in left-wing dominated army units. The speech was his most forceful and critical of leftist extremist groups in his two months in power.

Referring to the kind of violence represented by eight gun and grenade attacks in the country Saturday, Azevedo said, "The political struggle is beginning with troubling frequency to turn into common crime."

"Let us be clear: if the violence being imposed on us does not recede through persuasion, those who are causing it can only expect an adequate response."

Humphrey, Carter Lead In Demo Poll

Washington (AP)—Next year's Democratic ticket will be Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Jimmy Carter, a poll of 162 members of the Democratic National Committee indicates.

The poll was conducted by U.S. News & World Report and published Sunday by that magazine.

Humphrey polled a resounding 49% in response to the question of who committee members thought would win their party's presidential nomination.

Closest competitor to the Minnesota senator was Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington with 14%, followed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, 8%; Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, 6% and Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, 5%.

But on the question of who the committee members personally favor for the nod, Humphrey polled only 22%.

In that category Kennedy collected 12% for second spot, followed by Jackson, 9%, Udall 8% and Carter, 7%.

Carter, formerly governor of Georgia, collected a strong 41% vote from the delegates asked to predict who would be the party's vice presidential choice, and he got 28% from them when asked whom they favored personally for vice president.

In predicting who would be chosen for vice president, the committee members gave Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas second place at 20%, followed by Bayh, 9%. Bentsen and Bayh also came in second and third in personal preferences for vice president with 10 and 7% respectively.

The committee members were also asked which candidate seemed to have the most support in their area, and here Jackson topped the list with 22%, followed by Humphrey at 16%, Alabama Gov. George Wallace, 14%; Bentsen, 10% and Udall, 8%.

Sixty-five per cent of the committee members predicted that the race will be settled at the convention rather than in the primaries, and some 75% said they did not believe Kennedy could be prevailed upon to accept the nomination if he were chosen.

To the question of whether Wallace will be on the ticket, 94% said no, and 70% said they would not support a ticket that included Wallace.

Finally, the committee members were asked if the ticket needed a southerner to help hold the south, and 59% said no.

CIA Will Survive
Washington — Officials of the Central Intelligence Agency, despite repeated public claims of diminished prestige and operational ability, now are convinced that the agency will weather the current congressional hearings with no serious loss of authority and no erosion of ability to produce professional intelligence estimates and reports. The agency's key officials now expect neither the House nor the Senate intelligence committee to recommend a flat ban on clandestine intelligence activities, such as those conducted against the Allende government in Chile. Instead, they said, the committees will seek more stringent controls on such operations. This is a compromise welcomed by the agency.

Jews See Pretext
United Nations — On the eve of a vote by the General Assembly of the United Nations on a draft resolution that has termed Zionism "a form of racism and racial discriminations," leaders of American-Jewish organizations told U.N. officials and delegates that approval may provide a pretext for anti-Semitism. Efforts by some U.N. delegates to avoid a vote on the resolution apparently have failed.

No Victory Expected

Manchester, N.H. — Laurence I. Radway, the Democratic chairman in New Hampshire and a professor of government at Dartmouth College, said about forthcoming primaries in the state that "my basic view is that no Democrat is likely to score anything resembling a victory here, and we'll all be left scratching for significance. All these bright and sassy campaign operations are going to neutralize each other by the time we vote."

Woman Marine Allowed Honorable Discharge

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Marine 2nd Lt. Mary Niflis has been allowed to resign under honorable conditions by a military which feared the mushrooming publicity generated by the charges against her, the woman's civilian attorney said Sunday.

Jay Jeffcoat of El Centro, Calif., said the Marine Corps realized that the news coverage already given to the case, in which Lt. Niflis, 23, was accused of sexual relations with six enlisted men, was only a "sneak preview" of what would follow.

Her court-martial, which had been scheduled this month, would have involved

"allegations with explicit sexual details, which even responsibly covered by journalists would have been sensational," Jeffcoat said in a telephone interview.

Jeffcoat said he spoke by phone last week with a Pentagon lawyer who was "giving us one last opportunity" for the lieutenant to resign with an undesirable discharge, under which she would have lost all veteran's privileges.

Jeffcoat said he told the lawyer that "we had not done anything intentionally for publicity. I spoke to reporters when they called, but there were no news conferences and no interviews with her... If we were really trying to stir things up, we would have got her on the Dick Cavett show to really let the military know what to expect."

"The story was of such value already that if they (the Marine Corps) thought there was a furor at this point, they knew it was just a sneak preview."

Lt. Niflis was charged last July with "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentlewoman" for allegedly having sex with six enlisted men on different occasions at the Marine Corps Air Station here. Jeffcoat had called it a "classic example of the denial of equal justice" because none of the men was charged.

Jeffcoat said the Marine Corps would have had to call the men to testify to prove its case, "and I felt there was some very impeachable material."

Some of the sergeants allegedly involved with Lt. Niflis "were told their career was on the line if they didn't cooperate. Most of them first responded, 'I don't know what you're talking about.' Later they were told there would be no jeopardy for them and there would be no charges for them" if they cooperated, he said.

Lt. Niflis, a tall, slender woman divorced from a Marine she met in basic training, told a reporter she would make no comment until she is a civilian again.

Lt. Niflis' mother, Mrs. Jean Rickard, 66, of Southbury, Conn., has called for a congressional investigation of the military's treatment of her daughter. The lieutenant, a graduate of LeMoyne College in Syracuse, N.Y., has been stationed here for one year.

Survey: Betty Ford Popular First Lady

By LOUIS HARRIS
Whatever President Ford's problems with the public, Betty Ford has now become one of the most popular wives of a President to occupy the White House. On the controversial statements made by Mrs. Ford recently, the public leaves no doubt that it backs her up decisively.

By 64-23%, a sizable majority also supports Mrs. Ford when she said "if her daughter were having an affair, she would want to know if the young man were nice or not." Again, the division between the young and old is decisive. A 73-14% majority of the 18-29 age group is for her, as is a 67-21% majority of the 30-49 age group. But a smaller, 54-31% majority of people 50 and over supports her on this issue.

To test the reception given Mrs. Ford on her controversial statements, the Harris Survey asked a cross-section of 1,519 adults nationwide: "Do you tend to agree or disagree with Mrs. Betty Ford when she said (read list)?"

backing she receives is highly significant. Most solidly behind the first lady are people who live on the east and west coasts, residents of big cities and the suburbs, young people under 30, those who have had some college education, professional and executive types, union members, people with incomes of $15,000 and over, those who have a liberal political philosophy and political independents. Far less in support of the first lady are those who live in the South, small town and rural residents, people who are 50 and over, skilled labor, blacks, low-income people and conservatives. By and large, Mrs. Ford is supported most by those segments of the public who are least likely to back her husband in the 1976 election. By the same token, she finds her least support among those who are apt to back the President, the more conservative, small-town and rural residents, and the elderly.

A political conclusion that might be drawn is that Mrs. Ford's statements probably did not help her husband's cause with the activist conservatives in the Republican party, whom Mr. Ford is trying to court in his battle with former Gov. Ronald Reagan. But Mrs. Ford's outspoken statements have won support from those younger and more independent elements in the electorate, who are indispensable to her husband in a contest for the White House next fall. In short, Betty Ford has a wide and deep following in the mainstream of American life, and surely must be judged a solid asset to her husband in the White House.

Survey: Betty Ford Popular First Lady

By LOUIS HARRIS
Whatever President Ford's problems with the public, Betty Ford has now become one of the most popular wives of a President to occupy the White House. On the controversial statements made by Mrs. Ford recently, the public leaves no doubt that it backs her up decisively.

By 64-23%, a sizable majority also supports Mrs. Ford when she said "if her daughter were having an affair, she would want to know if the young man were nice or not." Again, the division between the young and old is decisive. A 73-14% majority of the 18-29 age group is for her, as is a 67-21% majority of the 30-49 age group. But a smaller, 54-31% majority of people 50 and over supports her on this issue.

To test the reception given Mrs. Ford on her controversial statements, the Harris Survey asked a cross-section of 1,519 adults nationwide: "Do you tend to agree or disagree with Mrs. Betty Ford when she said (read list)?"

San Francisco — "It is a bawdy planet," said Will Shakespeare who had seen many things on earth. It's also flat. Still flat as a pancake. So says The International Flat Earth Research Society.

"Your claim that the Flat Earth Society was disbanded is entirely false." That's the kind of letter to warm a nippy morning. Set the head to whirling and the marrow crumping.

It was a wire service story out of England that said: "After seeing photographs taken from space vehicles, The Flat Earth Society today disbanded."

Usually I don't take London's journalists without a pinch of salt. Heaven knows what those jaunty fellows are smoking. They come up with dispatches like this that came over the wire one day:

Torn Brown's cow is dead. While munching on the marshy meadows of the Mallow, she was bitten on the udder by an adder.

The Flat Earth letter is from Charles Johnson, President, in Lancaster, Calif.

"I can't understand where you got such an idea," he says. "The longer the idiotic childish farce called 'the space program' goes on, the more people have woke up to the fact it is all Buck Rogers fake movies!"

I got onto the Flat Earth Society several years ago. I was living in London. S. Shenton, F.R.A.S., F.R.G.S. was honorary president. London was world headquarters.

We had some correspondence — the society was eager to contact journalists.

The theory of a flat earth is not new. In fact the theory of a round and moving earth has been around a shorter time than the flat earth idea.

As for things like "Around The World in 80 Days," the flat earth people only pity those who believe it.

In a previous letter, the society said: "The earth is shaped somewhat like a saucer. Round-the-world airline tickets are sold to a gullible public."

No Flat Earth person would buy a round-the-world ticket when it was possible to spend less time and money by simply cutting across the diameter. New York to Bangkok on a direct line. Forget flying around the edge of the saucer.

At the same time I was in touch with the Flat Earth Society, I was on to UFOs and people from outer space.

Most of them were living down around Twenty-nine Palms in the California desert. They were tuned into a half dozen space vehicles who circled the earth waiting for us to get wise and stop making nuclear bombs.

In fact there were so many messages coming through you wondered how they found a clear channel.

I had one chap who had been aboard a space ship. The ship had a very attractive woman captain and she took him for a ride.

"It was the greatest experience of my life," he said when I interviewed him. I should say so.

"We fully expect the U.S. government by or before 1984 to admit the earth is flat!" says President Johnson.

The president has been on CBS, NBC and Radio Monitor. At present he's planning for a 1976 convention in Boston. He has a great affection for the Boston Globe where he had a satisfactory interview.

"This is the darkest age ever recorded in history. So called 'science' is based entirely on superstition. Please correct yourself. We are 'Alive and Well.' That's the good news, O ye of little faith.

Hunting Ban Investigated

Omaha (AP) — U.S. District Atty. Daniel Wherry says he is investigating reports that Indian officials in Macy have forbidden hunting in Thurston County, and have been confiscating hunters' weapons.

Wherry said complicated statutes are involved in the apparent dispute, and that there are laws which forbid those other than Indians from hunting and fishing on Indian lands.

However, Wherry said, much of the Indian land in Thurston County is leased to white farmers. He added that there is some land in Thurston County which does not belong to the Indians.

"One question... is whether the person leasing the land has the right to allow hunters to use the land," said Wherry.

Thurston County Sheriff Clyde Storie said he has received a few complaints from hunters, and that he referred the problem to Wherry's office.

Food Stamps Cut

Washington (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee cut more than $1 billion from funds requested for the food stamp program, saying equivalent savings could be made "if the Agriculture Department would change the regulations and enforce them."

The Perils Of Switching

Nebraska political observers are waiting for the other shoe to drop.

It has been some days now since Omaha Mayor Ed Zorinsky told some folks he was thinking about switching from the Republican to the Democratic Party and running for the U.S. Senate seat now occupied by Roman Hruska. Zorinsky had trailed fellow Republican and Hruska appointee John Y. McCollister badly in early polls. John Y. declares officially for the Senate today. The conventional wisdom is that Zorinsky, a popular mayor who was elected with strong Democratic support, to a nonpartisan post, would do better to avoid a GOP primary fight with McCollister and capitalize on his friendship with Omaha Democrats in a confrontation with Hess Dyas and possibly others in the Democratic primary. A better chance there, perhaps, to make it to November.

Actually, what Zorinsky said was, if he runs, he'll run as a Democrat. It was Dyas, the former Democratic state chairman and First District congressional nominee who is gearing up for the Senate contest, who said Zorinsky will run. Zorinsky said he would make his decision and announcement in good time.

Presumably the Omaha mayor is now sampling reaction to the suggestion that if he ran for the Senate he would change parties and run as a Democrat. Presumably he is trying to get an idea of how Democrats feel about an abrupt party switch to their ranks to take on a Republican in the general election who owns most of the GOP turf.

Will Zorinsky be called an opportunist? Yes, he will.

All of Zorinsky's merits aside, a sudden party switch has to have, in the minds of most voters, opportunism or the appearances of it stamped all over it.

That is not to say that people shouldn't change parties out of ideological compulsion. Ronald Reagan started life as a Democrat and now he and that party wouldn't claim each other. He is running for president as a conservative Republican for obvious reasons — and one of them is not because it would be easier to get elected as a conservative Republican. On the other hand, John B. Connally, an old Democrat, shifted gears when it became apparent he was dead-ended in the Democratic Party and might make it big and quick in the GOP. All the switch did for him was to burnish his wheeler-dealer image.

Zorinsky has much to recommend him in a bid for any office. If his popularity in Omaha is any indication, he conceivably could mount a strong threat in any number of pairings statewide. And it may well be that ideologically Zorinsky is as much a Democrat as any Nebraska politician in that party. But eleventh hour party switches inevitably invite the suggestion that a political party is merely a vehicle to office which lacks philosophic substance. Unfairly or not, it raises questions of loyalty and motivation.

Ed Zorinsky won't faint dead away at the suggestion of opportunism. But it is something he has to think seriously about.

A Paean To The Fan

Ellis Rainsberger should be indicted for perjury. He lied. He said his pore oil boys were so hurt and thin that nobody thought they could make a game of it; that even the "Little Sisters of the Poor," as Bob Devaney would say, could take them out 1-2-3.

The Wildcats, however, were as flinty as the hills surrounding Manhattan. An unyielding band of fakers.

Look at the bloody noses on the sour faces in No. 3's locker room after the game.

Well, it was only 12-0.

But:

Remember the athletic pedigree of these lads: their heritage.

Remember that they play in a suicide league — a fact which sometimes escapes those raters who haven't been exposed to the blast furnace of Big Eight football.

Know that these 12-point victors over Kansas State now share with only one other team the longest winning streak among major college football powers. Appreciate that 12-0 game as the 500th win in the University of Nebraska's long and glorious gridiron history.

Know that the Huskers are gifted athletes, well coached, and that they will redevelop their appetite and ambition.

Think about the dazzling weather last Saturday at Manhattan, the howling throngs of red-clad faithful. Consider the carnage wrought by another Kansas tribe, the one from the Kaw, on the warpath in Norman.

Contemplate all of that and be happy you're a Cornhusker.

C. L. SULZBERGER

Soviet Navy Growing

PANAMA CITY, Panama—Until its fleet was wiped out by the Japanese at Tsushima in 1905, Russia had been a considerable naval power since the 18th Century. Indeed, after the American Revolution, John Paul Jones accepted the office of rear admiral in the service of Catherine the Great.

But Czarist Russia never recovered from its disastrous defeat off the tip of Korea. Apart from a few submarines and torpedo boats, Soviet vessels likewise played an insignificant role in World War II. It had become axiomatic that Russia was not a sea power but a land power.

The first hint that Stalinist Moscow was beginning to think in terms of maritime warfare came in 1943 when the British battleship Royal Sovereign and the United States cruiser Milwaukee were handed over to the Soviet Union and fought as the U.S.S.R.'s only two operable capital ships, renamed the Archangel and Murmansk.

Since that low ebb, when Stalin's naval advisers first began to dream about the kind of blue water fleet that was customarily regarded as the status symbol of a great power, the Russians have worked hard to create a navy comparable with their vast strength on land and in the air.

Adm. Sergei Gorshkov took charge of the task when it assumed its first impressive proportions. He boasted on Navy Day (July 31), 1966: "An end has been put to the complete domination of the sea by the imperialist powers."

Gorshkov, who joined the navy at 17 and became an admiral at 31, had survived wholesale Stalinist purges. He boasted a good war record at Odessa and in command of a Danube flotilla. In 1962, after the Cuban confrontation, his ambitions to accelerate naval development were given a complete go-ahead.

He instituted a new type of global electronic intelligence handled by fishing trawlers. He developed the world's largest submarine force. He dotted the oceans with massive buoys where his ships could tie up. He insisted on constructing helicopter carriers and now aircraft carriers, the first of which has been commissioned.

Thanks to this redoubtable man, Russia is today the second greatest naval power in the world and may before long be the first. By Navy Day, 1970, Gorshkov could claim: "Soviet Navy ships are constantly on the ocean including the stamping grounds of the NATO strike fleets."

Through his vision, the Soviet admiral has been able to get the U.S.S.R. back into the role imagined for Russia by Peter the Great and Catherine the Great, a drive toward the southerly Indian Ocean and Mediterranean.

Peter even had a project to annex Madagascar. Catherine concentrated on biting off pieces of Ottoman Turkey. In the 1820s, when Greece gained its independence, a strong Russian fleet fought beside the British and France against the Turks.

The consequence of this persistent policy is that Moscow has gained influence in many distant corners of the world. It has opened naval facilities in the Indian Ocean as the British (Sri Lanka, Gan, Dahrin, Mauritius) and the French (Madagascar and the Comores) closed up shop and while the Americans have trouble gaining congressional approval for unimpressive dots like Diego Garcia.

In the Mediterranean, where the Soviet fleet permanently on station compares well with the U.S. Sixth Fleet, Moscow has been able to use this new factor for diplomatic purposes. From the Red Sea (now linked by a reopened Suez Canal), where its ships have facilities as far down as Somalia, right into the Mediterranean heart, Russia makes its power felt.

As Turkey and Greece vie to expel American bases and weaken NATO, Soviet diplomacy calmly shifts from the Egyptian bases once available to other installations in Libya from which it can survey U.S. vessels. Moscow maintains a presence in Syria's ports, and has tentatively explored chances of future facilities in Malta, which once contemplated submission to the Czar.

Now, with Italy on the possible brink of a coalition including communists, with Spain's future uncertain, and with Portugal's (at the Mediterranean gate) badly troubled, the U.S.S.R. is speedily outflanking NATO from the south. And here in Panama U.S. strategists worry about our naval link between two oceans.

None of this was imaginable until Moscow had developed a navy strong enough to offset implied American political pressures (viz. Lebanon-Syria-Iraq, 1958, or Jordan-Israel, 1970).

And the man ultimately responsible for this remarkable change is not Brezhnev but Gorshkov, who hatched the Soviet naval chicken from its first Russian egg.

George Burns 'Hot' Again At 79

NEW YORK — In 1958, when he was in his eighth year on television with his wife, Gracie Allen, George Burns was dubbed "the elder statesman of TV comedy." Now he's 17 years more elder, and last month the movie industry voted him "The Star of Tomorrow."

At 79, George is hot. Which is the way he likes things. "I like everything hot," he says. "I want the soup hot, the plate hot, the spoon hot. I always say, 'If you can carry it, I don't want it.'"

"People worry about my stomach, but I have a good stomach. I grew up with seven sisters and five brothers and we had to have good stomachs because we ate a lot of sauces. My mother always had a pot on the stove with sauces brewing — so hot you couldn't taste what she put them over. Wood chips in a sauce was not uncommon. It was the original garbage soup; anything we had went into the sauce pot. A little chalk from school in your pocket? Throw it in the sauce."

"We were poor but we always felt secure because we thought everybody lived that way — or worse. We slept on mattresses on the floor, but Mother said, 'You kids have it lucky — some people don't have floors to sleep on.' It was a great one-liner."

Burns always wanted to be in show business, but his father was religious. "I wanted to sing with the Peewee Quartet, but Dad wanted me to sing only on Friday night with my hat on. He died when I was six. At seven, I was singing on street corners with the Peewees. I had a lot of jobs. At 14, I had two dancing schools, one on the Lower East Side and one in Brooklyn. I could teach anybody to dance; all you had to do was hold their shoulders and show them the steps. Trouble is these guys couldn't dance with anybody but me. I was the only one who would hold their shoulders and move them."

He moved up. He sang in saloons and on ferryboats. He was the human half of a seal act. Then one day in the early 1920s when he was making $40 a week as a comic, he met Gracie Allen. They became Burns and Allen, then man-and-wife. "That's when I retired," he says. "All I had to do was ask, 'Gracie, how's your brother,' and she told me, and everybody broke up."

Ironically, it was George, who loved show biz, who had to be the straight man while Gracie, who didn't like to work particularly, was the star. "The Equal Rights Amendment wouldn't have appealed to Gracie. She wanted to do nothing. She loved service, and she got it. She had beautiful homes, magnificent cars, a big swimming pool and people who loved her. How liberated can you be?"

When Gracie died in 1964, they had been married 38 years. He missed her. George had described how upset he was — how he couldn't sleep. Then one night he tried sleeping in her twin bed, and it felt warm. He began to sleep again.

But for Burns, after nearly four decades of being professionally successful, the pace of necessity slowed. He was still beloved — but he wasn't booked as often. He fell into a routine which he follows today. "I go to my office for two hours, then to my club for lunch, then two hours of bridge from 1:30 to 3:30. I play fairly good bridge; at least the guys I play with are worse than I am. Then I go home and take a nap for an hour and a half, then I get up and drink a couple of martinis, and then I get out with a lot of young girls. I like that. Their youth rubs off on me, and I like to think some of my wisdom rubs off on them," he says with an innocent leer.

When George Burns' best friend, Jack Benny, died — George inherited his role in the upcoming film, "The Sunshine Boys."

"It's the most exciting thing I've ever done," he says, while insiders speculate that his dramatic performance as an aging vaudeville comic may win him an Oscar. Since its completion, he has been interviewed constantly, and has appeared as a guest on many top TV shows. "For the money? I should say not. The makeup man who did (co-star) Walter Matthau got more money out of this picture than I did. No — it's for the thrill of being back in business. It's amazing to me I still have anything to say. It's good to be old, because any question I'm asked brings back a dozen memories."

"I'm 79. I'll soon be 80. Jack (Benny) hated 80. He thought it was unlucky, and when I tried to cheer him up — I said, 'Look, Jack, you want to be 82 again, call your agent Irving Fine, he'll fix it up!' — Jack didn't think it was funny. When something didn't hit Jack's funny bone, he'd forget your name. He said 'That's not funny, Harry.'"

"I guess it wasn't, either. Jack never got to 81. But I don't worry about things I can't do anything about. It's like when the doctor told me I had to have open-heart surgery last year, and I said what would happen if I don't, and he said I'd die. I said okay, let's get it over with, because I don't want to die. And I don't, of course, but I refuse to worry about it because we all go sometime. Don't we? Say, if you hear of another exit, would you let me know?"

Jerry Ford And The Almighty

Chicago—What ever happened to that kind, compassionate fellow, Jerry Ford? Remember him? It was little more than a year ago that he came home from church and plucked our heartstrings by granting a "full, free and absolute pardon" to former President Sneaky.

He described how he had searched his conscience, tried to figure what God would like, and that he couldn't find it in his heart to be mean.

It shows how times can change — depending on who needs a break.

Now we see a new Jerry Ford, a cold glint in his eye and a stern wiggle of his finger, as he tells the people who live in New York that before he will lift a hand to help them, they can go straight to bankruptcy court.

When it came to President Sneaky, the old, kindly Ford said:

"... Serious allegations hang like a sword over our President's head, threatening his health as he tries to reshape his life, a great part of which was spent in the service of this country."

Well, what about the sword over the heads of 7,000,000 citizens of New York, most of whom are law-abiding, hard-working, and have never erased 18 minutes of tape? What about the time they spent in the service of their country, whether it was in the military or working to pay their income taxes without any phony tax write-offs for vice-presidential papers? How will their health be when city hospitals have to shut down?

Back then, he said: "... A former President of the United States, instead of enjoying equal treatment with any other citizen accused of violating the law, would be cruelly and excessively penalized either in preserving the presumption of his innocence or in obtaining a speedy determination of guilt in order to repay a legal debt to society."

Speaking of cruel and excessive penalties for debts: Just what terrible crime have the school children of New York committed? What have they done to deserve the further punishment of getting an even more sub-standard education than they now are receiving? That's just one of the results we can expect under Ford's to-hell-with-New York program of domestic economics.

And remember how he said: "It is not the ultimate fate of Richard Nixon that most concerns me, though surely it deeply troubles every decent person. My concern is the immediate future of this great country."

It would be just swell for the future of this country to have its biggest city in debtors' court. And, as a result of Ford's attitude, to have that city's unemployment jump to 20%. And not one of the people who lose their jobs will be able to retire to San Clemente with a staff and a fat budget. But, then, who are they? Not one of them has ever sipped scotch with Bebe Rebozo.

Ford's voice oozed kindness when he said: "My conscience tells me it is my duty not merely to proclaim domestic tranquility, but to use every means that I have to ensure it."

Oh, boy, are we going to see some domestic tranquility in New York City when they have to start laying off cops, firemen, garbage collectors and health workers. What a tranquil combination — more angry men without jobs, more dropouts on the streets, more desperation and less law-enforcement. If that's domestic tranquility, then Patty Hearst is homecoming queen.

And he was at his pious best when he said: "I do not believe, with all my heart and mind and soul, that I, not as president, but as a humble servant of God, will receive justice without mercy if I fail to show mercy."

Mercy for President Sneaky, yes, who did nothing more than betray the Constitution, disgrace the highest office, lie, cheat, fink and give us a national nervous breakdown. But the hard nose for millions of ordinary people, whose greatest crime was that they had political leaders who overspent.

And for that matter, why did they overspend? New York, more than any other city, got the wretched poor not only of Europe but of our own country. Instead of saying sink or swim, as Ford now clucks, New York at least tried to give them education, medical care and a place to live.

If other parts of the country — many of which now gleefully applaud Ford's cruel position — had not been in the habit of kicking around the poor and lower classes, they might not have flocked to New York and other cities that now face economic disaster.

And if congressmen like Ford hadn't pretended for years that these people weren't getting kicked around, New York might not have its present problems.

But how filled with charity he was last year when he said: "I have promised to uphold the Constitution, to do what is right as God gives me to see the right..."

Tell us, Mr. Ford, why God was so soft on Nixon, but is so down on all those people in New York?

Heading toward the Ides of November: Stalking the enemy for nine weeks, the Huskers must turn one more corner this week before they come face to face with the Sooners. But first a big wind blows in Saturday to challenge them.

After days of division and indecision, the Legislature approaches its final reckoning on the governor's tax and budget proposals.

And politics continues to push its way into the headlines, even though next year's elections lie 12 months ahead. Rockefeller departs the scene (maybe); a presidential hopeful visits Lincoln today, and Congressman McCollister travels to five cities this day to officially confirm his candidacy for the Senate.

Meanwhile, in Omaha, Ed Zorinsky is trying to figure out whether he is a Democrat or not.

Elsewhere in the state, some Nebraskans sit down to pen an outraged note to Sports Illustrated. Thanks for the nice things you wrote about the Huskers, they will say, but curse you for the put-down of our state.

Wall-to-wall dust, you say? You should have seen it this beautiful October and early November. Sure, we'd like to have some mountains. But there is a beauty in the rolling plains and the big sky which we would never trade for your crowded concrete cities. Forget it, babe.

So we head for mid-November... with winter surely lying ahead somewhere down the path. It's gonna be a shorter one this year, thanks to the early November spring which fooled the flowers and pampered us all. You know the snows are coming. And that's fine. Just spare us those dark stretches of cold and cloudy days when neither sun nor snow breaks the gloom. Okay?

Enough rambling... let's finish it up: The Legislature is often criticized for its indecision. It changes its collective mind, reverses past decisions and veers off course at almost every turn.

The question which always arises at that point is: Would a partisan unicameral be better?

My views (I know, who asked?) have often varied on that subject, and they may again. But they currently come down on the side of non-partisanship.

What would partisan organization have gained in this special session?

Okay, the decisions would have been hammered together by a Republican majority whose goals would have included embarrassment of the Democratic governor.

One of the primary questions in the private deliberations of the majority leadership would have been: How do we make Exon look bad? How do we outmaneuver him? How do we get him?

You'd have to be rather naive to believe those questions were not privately asked by some senators this session even under the current circumstances. But there can be no organized effort to play partisan politics in the non-partisan Unicameral.

There is no party discipline in Nebraska's Legislature.

In fact, as many senators can tell you from sad first-hand experience, they are not very welcome in the inner councils of their own party, whether they be Republicans or Democrats. With few... very few... exceptions, they are viewed as outsiders.

So they are free to follow their own course, mixing conscience with connivance in whatever doses they wish. They can vote their independent judgment or their constituents' fears. They can lead or follow, or choose to do neither. And so there is indecision and uncertainty.

Senators elect a speaker to lead, but only to lead them in a technical sense, organizing a schedule and preparing an agenda. They do not want him to take more than one-fourth-ninth of the legislative power.

So the power is divided and diffused, and leaders emerge on various issues — only as they choose and as the rest of the Legislature permits. Then they fade back into the legislative fabric to share power on an equal basis.

So last week, Bob Clark led the way on solving the state treasury's cash flow problem. Jules Burchack led the way on resolving the tax question. Loran Schmitt was the leader in hammering together a budget compromise. Cal Carsten helped refine the Burchack package. Jerry Warner and Doug Bereuter helped flesh out the budget decision.

And when this week is done, and all the senators have gone home, none of them will hold any more power than he or she did before the session began.

Good or bad? You decide.

One thing seems clear: If Nebraskans wanted a representative body, free from partisan political control, with diffused power, in which every senator is largely on his own free to contribute and help lead or sit silent and gather cobwebs, they've got it.

High Court To Hear Debate On Spending

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court will hear oral arguments today, Nov. 10, in a case challenging the constitutionality of the Federal Elections Campaign Act Amendments of 1974.

One man's reform is another man's repression, as the controversy surrounding the financing of federal election campaigns amply demonstrates. Enacted in the aftermath of Watergate, the Federal Elections Campaign Act Amendments of 1974 were designed to prevent any recurrence of the spending abuses associated with the 1972 presidential election campaign. But critics of the law contend, in effect, that the cure is worse than the cold, and they have taken their case to the Supreme Court. A decision is expected by the end of the year.

The plaintiffs are an oddly assorted lot of liberals and conservatives. They include Human Events, the conservative weekly newspaper; the New York Civil Liberties Union; Sen. James L. Buckley Jr. Cons-R N.Y.; and former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., who has announced his intention to seek the presidency in 1976 as an independent.

Among other provisions, the 1974 law established the first spending limits ever for candidates in presidential primary and general elections and in primary campaigns for the House and Senate. It also set new spending ceilings for general election campaigns for Congress, provided for optional public financing of presidential election campaigns, and established a Federal Election Commission to administer election laws. Moreover, limits were placed on the amount of money individuals and groups may contribute to candidates and party organizations.

Although the plaintiffs in the pending Supreme Court case oppose the law in toto, they have three principal complaints. They argue that (1) the limits on individual contributions constitute an illegal restraint of the First Amendment right to free expression, (2) the limits on spending not only impede free expression but also do so in an arbitrary and unfair manner, and (3) the method of apportioning public campaign funds discriminates against third parties and independent candidates.

Supporters of the law maintain that it does no more than is necessary to curb the growing influence on office-seekers of big contributors and to restore public confidence in the integrity of the election process. Public financing, they say, is a valid federal expenditure, for the money is raised through voluntary checkoffs on federal income tax returns.

The Supreme Court may strike down some provisions of the law while upholding others, and thus could create problems. If the Court should uphold the spending limits but not the contribution limits, for example, the influence of wealthy campaign donors might increase — precisely the opposite of what the law's authors intended.

In McCarthy's opinion, the argument that "too much money is spent on election campaigns and... there should be strict spending limits... can also be applied to the press." In a column written for the Los Angeles Times, he explained: "With a slight addition to the law, the Federal Election Commission could say this to leading political reporters: 'Sorry, Johnny Apple and Jules Witcover, you can't cover the President. You exhausted your word allotments on the California primary.' With a record 30 primaries next year, reporters may be exhausted long before that."

The Perils Of Switching

Nebraska political observers are waiting for the other shoe to drop.

It has been some days now since Omaha Mayor Ed Zorinsky told some folks he was thinking about switching from the Republican to the Democratic Party and running for the U.S. Senate seat now occupied by Roman Hruska. Zorinsky had trailed fellow Republican and Hruska appointee John Y. McCollister badly in early polls. John Y. declares officially for the Senate today. The conventional wisdom is that Zorinsky, a popular mayor who was elected with strong Democratic support, to a nonpartisan post, would do better to avoid a GOP primary fight with McCollister and capitalize on his friendship with Omaha Democrats in a confrontation with Hess Dyas and possibly others in the Democratic primary. A better chance there, perhaps, to make it to November.

Actually, what Zorinsky said was, if he runs, he'll run as a Democrat. It was Dyas, the former Democratic state chairman and First District congressional nominee who is gearing up for the Senate contest, who said Zorinsky will run. Zorinsky said he would make his decision and announcement in good time.

Presumably the Omaha mayor is now sampling reaction to the suggestion that if he ran for the Senate he would change parties and run as a Democrat. Presumably he is trying to get an idea of how Democrats feel about an abrupt party switch to their ranks to take on a Republican in the general election who owns most of the GOP turf.

A Paean To The Fan

Ellis Rainsberger should be indicted for perjury. He lied. He said his pore ol' boys were so hurt and thin that nobody thought they could make a game of it; that even the "Little Sisters of the Poor," as Bob Devaney would say, could take them out 1-2-3.

The Wildcats, however, were as flinty as the hills surrounding Manhattan. An unyielding band of fakers.

Look at the bloody noses on the sour faces in No. 3's locker room after the game.

Look at the fat lip on the Mississippi Kid, Nebraska's nifty little deep back on punts. Look at the Husker's superbly conditioned All-American center wince as the tape is pulled from a battered brow. Look at the lasagna-loving quarterback, grimlipped and silent as he dresses. Wonder why "Tough" is not bashing lockers with his fist. Listen to Dr. Osborne warn about defeat at Armageddon if the boys don't improve.

Soviet Navy Growing

PANAMA CITY, Panama—Until its fleet was wiped out by the Japanese at Tsushima in 1905, Russia had been a considerable naval power since the 18th Century. Indeed, after the American Revolution, John Paul Jones accepted the office of rear admiral in the service of Catherine the Great.

But Czarist Russia never recovered from its disastrous defeat off the tip of Korea. Apart from a few submarines and torpedo boats, Soviet vessels likewise played an insignificant role in World War II. It had become axiomatic that Russia was not a sea power but a land power.

The first hint that Stalinist Moscow was beginning to think in terms of maritime warfare came in 1943 when the British battleship Royal Sovereign and the United States cruiser Milwaukee were handed over to the Soviet Union and fought as the U.S.S.R.'s only two operable capital ships, renamed the Archangel and Murmansk.

Since that low ebb, when Stalin's naval advisers first began to dream about the kind of blue water fleet that was customarily regarded as the status symbol of a great power, the Russians have worked hard to create a navy comparable with their vast strength on land and in the air.

Adm. Sergei Gorshkov took charge of the task when it assumed its first impressive proportions. He boasted on Navy Day (July 31), 1966: "An end has been put to the complete domination of the sea by the imperialist powers."

Gorshkov, who joined the navy at 17 and became an admiral at 31, had survived wholesale Stalinist purges. He boasted a good war record at Odessa and in command of a Danube flotilla. In 1962, after the Cuban confrontation, his ambitions to accelerate naval development were given a complete go-ahead.

He instituted a new type of global electronic intelligence handled by fishing trawlers. He developed the world's largest submarine force. He dotted the oceans with massive buoys where his ships could tie up. He insisted on constructing helicopter carriers and now aircraft carriers, the first of which has been commissioned.

Thanks to this redoubtable man, Russia is today the second greatest naval power in the world and may before long be the first. By Navy Day, 1970, Gorshkov could claim: "Soviet Navy ships are constantly on the ocean including the stamping grounds of the NATO strike fleets."

Through his vision, the Soviet admiral has been able to get the U.S.S.R. back into the role imagined for Russia by Peter the Great and Catherine the Great, a drive toward the southerly Indian Ocean and Mediterranean.

Peter even had a project to annex Madagascar. Catherine concentrated on biting off pieces of Ottoman Turkey. In the 1820s, when Greece gained its independence, a strong Russian fleet fought beside the British and France against the Turks.

The consequence of this persistent policy is that Moscow has gained influence in many distant corners of the world. It has opened naval facilities in the Indian Ocean as the British (Sri

Will Zorinsky be called an opportunist? Yes, he will.

All of Zorinsky's merits aside, a sudden party switch has to have, in the minds of most voters, opportunism or the appearances of it stamped all over it.

That is not to say that people shouldn't change parties out of ideological compulsion. Ronald Reagan started life as a Democrat and now he and that party wouldn't claim each other. He is running for president as a conservative Republican for obvious reasons — and one of them is not because it would be easier to get elected as a conservative Republican. On the other hand, John B. Connally, an old Democrat, shifted gears when it became apparent he was dead-ended in the Democratic Party and might make it big and quick in the GOP. All the switch did for him was to burnish his wheeler-dealer image.

Zorinsky has much to recommend him in a bid for any office. If his popularity in Omaha is any indication, he conceivably could mount a strong threat in any number of pairings statewide. And it may well be that ideologically Zorinsky is as much a Democrat as any Nebraska politician in that party. But eleventh hour party switches inevitably invite the suggestion that a political party is merely a vehicle to office which lacks philosophic substance. Unfairly or not, it raises questions of loyalty and motivation.

Ed Zorinsky won't faint dead away at the suggestion of opportunism. But it is something he has to think seriously about.

Well, it was only 12-0.

NEW YORK — In 1958, when he was in his eighth year on television with his wife, Gracie Allen, George Burns was dubbed "the elder statesman of TV comedy." Now he's 79 years more elder, and last month the movie industry voted him "The Star of Tomorrow."

At 79, George is hot. Which is the way he likes things. "I like everything hot," he says. "I want the soup hot, the plate hot, the spoon hot. I always say, 'If you can carry it, I don't want it.'"

"People worry about my stomach, but I have a good stomach. I grew up with seven sisters and five brothers and we had to have good stomachs because we ate a lot of sauces. My mother always had a pot on the stove with sauces brewing — so hot you couldn't taste what she put them over. Wood chips a la sauce was not uncommon. It was the original garbage soup; anything we had went into the sauce pot. A little chalk from school in your pocket? Throw it in the sauce."

"We were poor but we always felt secure because we thought everybody lived that way—or worse. We slept on mattresses on the floor, but Mother said, 'You kids have it lucky—some people don't have floors to sleep on.' It was a great one-liner."

Burns always wanted to be in show business, but his father was religious. "I wanted to sing with the Peewee Quartet, but Dad wanted me to sing only on Friday night with my hat on. He died when I was six. At seven, I was singing on street corners with the Peewees. I had a

After days of division and indecision, the Legislature approaches its final reckoning on the governor's tax and budget proposals.

And politics continues to push its way into the headlines, even though next year's elections lie 12 months ahead. Rockefeller departs the scene (maybe); a presidential hopeful visits Lincoln today, and Congressman McCollister travels to five cities this day to officially confirm his candidacy for the Senate.

Meanwhile, in Omaha, Ed Zorinsky is trying to figure out whether he is a Democrat or not.

Elsewhere in the state, some Nebraskans sit down to pen an outraged note to Sports Illustrated. Thanks for the nice things you wrote about the Huskers, they will say, but curse you for the put-down of our state.

Wall-to-wall dust, you say? You should have seen it this beautiful October and early November. Sure, we'd like to have some mountains. But there is a beauty in the rolling plains and the big sky which we would never trade for your crowded concrete cities. Forget it, babe.

So we head for mid-November... with winter surely lying ahead somewhere down the path. It's gonna be a shorter one this year, thanks to the early November spring which fooled the flowers and pampered us all.

You know the snows are coming. And that's fine. Just spare us those dark stretches of cold and cloudy days when neither sun nor snow breaks the gloom. Okay?

Enough rambling... let's finish it up: The Legislature is often criticized for its indecision. It changes its collective mind, reverses past decisions and veers off course at almost every turn.

The question which always arises at that point is: Would a partisan unicameral be better?

My views (I know, who asked?) have often varied on that subject, and they may again. But they currently come down on the side of non-partisanship.

What would partisan organization have gained in this special session?

Okay, the decisions would have been hammered together by a Republican majority whose goals would have included embarrassment of the Democratic governor.

One of the primary questions in the private deliberations of the majority leadership would have been: How do we make Exon look bad? How do we outmaneuver him? How do we get him?

You'd have to be rather naive to believe those questions were not privately asked by some senators this session even under the current circumstances. But there can be no organized effort to play partisan politics in the non-partisan Unicameral.

There is no party discipline in Nebraska's Legislature.

In fact, as many senators can tell you from sad first-hand experience, they are not very welcome in the inner councils of their own party, whether they be Republicans or Democrats. With few... very few... exceptions, they are viewed as outsiders.

So they are free to follow their own course, mixing conscience with connivance in whatever doses they wish. They can vote their independent judgment or their constituents' fears. They can lead or follow, or choose to do neither. And so there is indecision and uncertainty.

Senators elect a speaker to lead, but only to lead them in a technical sense, organizing a schedule and preparing an agenda. They do not want him to take more than one-fourth-ninth of the legislative power.

So the power is divided and diffused, and leaders emerge on various issues — only as they choose and as the rest of the Legislature permits. Then they fade back into the legislative fabric to share power on an equal basis.

So last week, Bob Clark led the way on solving the state treasury's cash flow problem. Jules Burbach led the way on resolving the tax question. Loran Schmit was the leader in hammering together a budget compromise. Cal Carsten helped refine the Burbach package. Jerry Warner and Doug Bereuter helped flesh out the budget decision.

And when this week is done, and all the senators have gone home, none of them will hold any more power than he or she did before the session began.

Good or bad? You decide.

One thing seems clear: If Nebraskans wanted a representative body, free from partisan political control, with diffused power, in which every senator is largely on his own free to contribute and help lead or sit silent and gather cobwebs, they've got it.

High Court To Hear Debate On Spending

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court will hear oral arguments today, Nov. 10, in a case challenging the constitutionality of the Federal Elections Campaign Act Amendments of 1974.

One man's reform is another man's repression, as the controversy surrounding the financing of federal election campaigns amply demonstrates. Enacted in the aftermath of Watergate, the Federal Elections Campaign Act Amendments of 1974 were designed to prevent any recurrence of the spending abuses associated with the 1972 presidential election campaign. But critics of the law contend, in effect, that the cure is worse than the cold, and they have taken their case to the Supreme Court. A decision is expected by the end of the year.

The plaintiffs are an oddly assorted lot of liberals and conservatives. They include Human Events, the conservative weekly newspaper; the New York Civil Liberties Union; Sen. James L. Buckley Jr. Cons-R N.Y.; and former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., who has announced his intention to seek the presidency in 1976 as an independent.

Among other provisions, the 1974 law established the first spending limits ever for candidates in presidential primary and general elections and in primary campaigns for the House and Senate. It also set new spending ceilings for general election campaigns for Congress, provided for optional public financing of presidential election campaigns, and established a Federal Election Commission to administer election laws. Moreover, limits were placed on the amount of money individuals and groups may contribute to candidates and party organizations.

Although the plaintiffs in the pending Supreme Court case oppose the law in toto, they have three principal complaints. They argue that (1) the limits on individual contributions constitute an illegal restraint of the First Amendment right to free expression, (2) the limits on spending not only impede free expression but also do so in an arbitrary and unfair manner, and (3) the method of apportioning public campaign funds discriminates against third parties and independent candidates.

Supporters of the law maintain that it does no more than is necessary to curb the growing influence on office-seekers of big contributors and to restore public confidence in the integrity of the election process. Public financing, they say, is a valid federal expenditure, for the money is raised through voluntary checkoffs on federal income tax returns.

The Supreme Court may strike down some provisions of the law while upholding others, and this could create problems. If the Court should uphold the spending limits but not the contribution limits, for example, the influence of wealthy campaign donors might increase — precisely the opposite of what the law's authors intended.

In McCarthy's opinion, the argument that "too much money is spent on election campaigns and... there should be strict spending limits... can also be applied to the press." In a column written for the Los Angeles Times, he explained: "with a slight addition to the law, the Federal Election Commission could say this to leading political reporters: 'Sorry, Johnny Apple and Jules Witcover, you can't cover the President. You exhausted your word allotments on the California primary.' " With a record 30 primaries next year, reporters may be exhausted long before that.

Pilot Kicks Out Man With Gun

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — They were sitting shoulder to shoulder in the tiny airplane when the passenger started talking about suicide. He pulled a gun, held it to the pilot's head and said: "You have a choice of dying in an airplane crash or dying from a bullet wound."

That was the story pilot Richard Leibundguth told after an airborne struggle that he said ended when he pushed his passenger out of the plane at 3,500 feet.

The young man fell to his death. Sheriff's deputies found his body in a field 25 miles southeast of Cape Girardeau, Mo.

The pilot landed the Cessna 150 Aerobat near the Mississippi River town, where police questioned him and sent him home.

No gun had been found by Sunday night. An FBI spokesman in St. Louis said searchers were still looking for it.

Leibundguth, who was 26 Sunday, flies for Tri-State Aero in Evansville, a city on the Ohio River near the point where Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky converge.

He said it was 11 a.m. Saturday when Jack Johnson Jr., a 19-year-old high school dropout with a medical discharge from the Army, called Tri-State Aero to inquire about chartering a plane for a "joy ride" over Evansville.

"We took off about 11:45. While I was circling north, I turned to find his pistol pointed at my head," Leibundguth said. "I was instructed to climb to 10,000 feet and head southwest."

The Cessna 150 is a single-engine craft which has trouble reaching 10,000 feet. Leibundguth leveled off at 8,500 feet. By then they were over Paducah, Ky.

"I headed west. I tried to distract him in order to take the gun away." That was all Leibundguth would say after he returned to Evansville.

The rest of his story comes from the typewritten report he gave his boss, Tom Speer, president of Tri-State Aero: "Johnson kept asking how much fuel was left and was advised they had about 45 minutes."

It was now 1:30 p.m., and the plane was heading west from Paducah.

"At this time Johnson put the gun to the pilot's head and told him he had the choice of dying in an airplane crash or dying from a bullet wound," Speer said. "At that time he was instructed to put the airplane in a spin. He did this and Johnson locked his left arm in the pilot's right arm and put the gun in his rib cage."

"After losing 5,000 feet altitude, the pilot went for the gun and a shot was fired. In the struggle, the passenger was pushed out of the airplane."

In Cape Girardeau, 115 miles west of Evansville, County Sheriff W.J. Simmons said Leibundguth told his deputies that Johnson took off his seat belt and ordered Leibundguth to do the same.

At 3,500 feet, Leibundguth told them, the door, which was on Johnson's side, flew open. The pilot said he turned the plane on its side and kicked at Johnson until he fell out.

At first, Leibundguth thought the bullet from Johnson's gun had hit his leg. Later, he found it had only struck his seat belt and bruised his thigh.

There was no indication that Leibundguth and Johnson knew each other before the flight, although Johnson's father is an aircraft mechanic at Dress Regional Airport where Leibundguth's company is located.

The youth's aunt, Patricia Johnson, said her nephew had no social life outside his family.

"He was mixed up, confused," she said. "He couldn't seem to find himself. He would take a job and be dissatisfied. It was a vicious cycle for him."

"He did have a pleasing personality," she added.

The aunt said Johnson received a medical discharge from the Army after serving at Ft. Jackson, S.C., because "he was injured in an accident."

The young man's father, Jack R. Johnson Sr., said Saturday night his son was in a "real good mood this morning. He ate breakfast with us and left."

The elder Johnson said his son did not own a gun. He expressed disbelief that the boy could have been involved in a hijacking.

"The only thing we know for sure is that the boy is dead," he said.

Budget Request Review Set By State Ed Board

The State Board of Education will review its 1976-77 capital construction budget requests in a 1 p.m. meeting Friday at the State Department of Education, 233 S. 10th.

Gov. J. James Exon has returned state agencies' building fund requests, pledging his recommendation only for critical items and directing agencies to reset priorities while focusing on maintenance and upkeep of facilities.

The board will be asked to tab the top need for the Nebraska School for the Deaf at Omaha, seeking $119,840 for a track and athletic facilities, bleachers, sidewalk replacement and chimney demolition. Other building needs there would be delayed a year.

Board projects through fiscal 1978 include the Diagnostic Resource Center at Cozad ($860,000) and a boys' dorm at the

In other business, the board will be asked to approve:

- Second-quarter special education claim forms, and revisions in school districts' special education plans and budgets.
- Requests to submit applications for federal funds for a metric education program and for the gifted and talented. A report will be presented on state aid for the gifted.
- Bilingual education projects, and suggested activities for the board's Student Advisory Committee.
- Appointments to the College Approval Advisory and the Certification Advisory Committees.

The board will hear reports on:

- Private vocational school laws (and board recommendations will be sought).
- The driver education program, and the state aid program for the culturally and educationally deprived.
- The audit of the Nebraska Schools for the Visually Handicapped, for the Deaf and for Trainable Retarded Children.

Board of Education members from Glen Rural High School in South Sioux City will appear before the board to ask consideration of a district hardship waiver.

Prof. Day Wins Dreyfus Grant

Victor W. Day, chemistry professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has been awarded a prestigious Dreyfus Teacher-Scholar Grant of $35,000.

Dr. Day was one of 15 recipients chosen from 112 candidates who were nominated by their schools as outstanding teachers and scholars in chemistry, biochemistry and chemical engineering.

Other recipients of grants totaling $515,000 from the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation of New York City were named from institutions such as Cal Tech, MIT, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth and Vanderbilt.

"Most Pleased, Proud" "We are certainly most pleased and proud" of Day, said Dr. G. G. Meisels, UNL chemistry department chairman. "It is certainly a strong indicator that this department is moving in a direction of excellence," a designation from the Legislature.

The foundation grant to Day and UNL recognizes his "demonstrated ability in teaching and research" and allows him five years to complete a project on X-ray crystallography, the structural study of crystals.

A physical chemist and biochemist who holds a joint appointment in chemistry and the School of Life Sciences, Day teaches undergraduate and graduate chemistry courses and directs graduate research programs.

Application Unrestricted Day said the Dreyfus award is unrestricted, for use to support UNL research by undergraduate and graduate students, for teaching, for initiating new teaching or research programs and for buying equipment. He said he'll apply the funds as broadly as possible.

Day intends to develop theoretical applications in bioinorganic, catalysis and molecular biology, explaining how systems work in inorganic and organometallic compounds, and examining structures of biologically significant molecules.

The award will assist Day in his teaching goal "to involve students rather than entertain them," and his research approach in which "the student works with me, not for me," as stated in his proposal.

Postdoctoral Work At MIT Day earned his bachelor's degree from Kentucky in 1965, his doctorate from Cornell in 1969 and did postdoctoral work at MIT, where he conducted research last summer.

"As a scientist, (Day) is most impressive for one at his age," Dr. Meisels wrote the foundation. "He is extremely productive and" in 2 1/2 years at UNL has "been able to develop an independent and original research program."

As "one of the outstanding young chemical educators in the country today," Day also exhibits "special talent" required to keep the field fascinating in teaching incoming science-oriented students as well as advanced chemistry majors, Meisels said.

More Post Offices May Close In Future

Omaha (AP) — Charles Dickey, manager of the Postal Service's Omaha District, predicts that more small post offices will be closed when present postmasters retire.

A recent government study that recommended the Postal Service could save $100 million a year by closing some 12,000 small post offices hasn't resulted in any increase of closings so far in Dickey's district, which includes Nebraska and western Iowa.

"Small post offices are not economical to operate, but people understandably get emotional when you want to close them," Dickey said.

He said "we won't close a post office if customers can't have the same or improved service."

One of the latest to be closed was the post office at Roscoe. The Postal Service said the Roscoe office, which had 50 customers, was closed Aug. 29 and the closing will result in an annual saving of $9,240.

Dickey said 12 Nebraska and western Iowa post offices have been closed in the last four years and two have been converted to contract post offices.

Computing the cost at the time of the closings or conversions, Dickey said nearly $100,000 is saved annually. He said the 14 offices had a total of 511 customers.

He said Nebraska once had 1,300 post offices and now has 700.

Man Booked On Suspicion Of Homicide

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said a Kansas City man was booked on suspicion of homicide Saturday night in the death of Betty Jackson, 44, of Omaha. Officers said she was shot outside the Admiral Theater.

Theater manager Joe Redmond said a man entered the theater and asked the cashier to call police. Officers said they found Miss Jackson slumped in the passenger seat of a car parked next to the theater. She was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Detective Robert Brisby said the man booked, Alvin Kirby, 49, told officers the shooting was accidental. He said he and Miss Jackson had been dating for 15 years and he would visit from Kansas City on weekends.

Legislative Bureaucracy Irks Regents

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

"Bureaucracy in action," complained University of Nebraska Regents Chairman Kermit Wagner.

"See, we just wiped out Halsey Forest," groused Lincoln Regent Ed Schwartzkopf, patting a stack of documents.

The butt of regents' criticism was the Legislature. Lawmakers this year in LB610, an omnibus appropriations bill, ordered NU to research, prepare and submit more than 40 reports under strict deadlines.

When the bill was being considered, The Lincoln Star reported concern and resentment among Lincoln campus administrators, who objected that the deadlines, related to the volume of work were unrealistic.

Last weekend, the regents felt the lawmakers' brunt. Chairman Wagner of Schuyler wondered aloud if NU officials could compile data on the amount of time that the paperwork — only half complete — has robbed from NU administrators' duties.

"Of course," Wagner said to laughter, "this would probably take another staff member" to accomplish.

NU President D. B. Varner, while "not complaining" about complying with the law, estimated the time his staff spends on the LB610 reports would translate to more than a man and a secretary a year. "There was not five cents put in our budget to accommodate this," Varner said.

Regent Schwartzkopf said although he's received all the reports completed to date, "I have not had time to even peruse through them." He said he doesn't believe state senators read them either, and "I don't think they're aware of the staff time and paperwork" NU must commit.

Schwartzkopf called for a "moratorium" on the remainder of the reports due. NU Vice President Steven Sample said each one must be printed in 50 to 1000 or more copies.

NU is increasingly "reacting" to legislators, thus becoming "totally responsive to others' wishes and whims," rather than taking the lead and planning aggressively for the university, Sample said.

McCollister Says Default For New York City Good

Washington (UPI) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., said Sunday New York City's default would be good because it would make it more difficult for other state and local governments to borrow money. The Nebraska Republican said this would be beneficial for two reasons — because local governments are "already deeply in debt and citizens are protesting" and because governments "should not compete with private industry for available investment capital."

McCollister said default by New York also would be good because investors would become "more selective" in buying municipal bonds, thus "rewarding fiscally sound municipalities with higher credit-worthiness."

The congressman said Omaha, would be among the cities "helped" by New York's financial collapse.

And that is "beginning to eat into an enormous fraction of our administrative effort" as a result, he said.

Regents decided to launch their own moratorium, unanimously approving Schwartzkopf's motion requiring that any board member's request for research studies and major reports first be approved by the regents' executive committee.

Omaha campus Chancellor Ronald Roskens reported on insufficient parking for students and staff, but opposed building a contemplated high-rise parking garage. Roskens favored reclaiming the Elmwood Park ravine adjacent to UNO for parking and recreational use.

Regents directed their attorney to draw up condemnation proceedings for consideration next month, and they anticipated a lawsuit from environmentalists over the park proposal.

In other business, regents:

— Raised UNO student fees, effective in spring 1976, from $30 to $36 for full-time students and from $15 to $18 for part-time students. UNO Student Regent Clint Bellows objected to "use of student money for things the state ought to be picking up (paying for)."

— Agreed to hold a December hearing on acquiring a service station in the heart of the UNL campus, to prevent "undesirable commercial development."

Prof. Day Wins Dreyfus Grant

Victor W. Day, chemistry professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has been awarded a prestigious Dreyfus Teacher-Scholar Grant of $35,000.

Dr. Day was one of 15 recipients chosen from 112 candidates who were nominated by their schools as outstanding teachers and scholars in chemistry, biochemistry and chemical engineering.

Other recipients of grants totalling $515,000 from the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation of New York City were named from institutions such as Cal Tech, MIT, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth and Vanderbilt.

'Most Pleased, Proud'
"We are certainly most pleased and proud" of Day, said Dr. G. G. Meisels, UNL chemistry department chairman. "It is certainly a strong indicator that this department is moving in a direction of excellence," a designation from the Legislature.

The foundation grant to Day and UNL recognizes his "demonstrated ability in teaching and research" and allows him five years to complete a project on X-ray crystallographics, the structural study of crystals.

A physical chemist and biochemist who holds a joint appointment in chemistry and the School of Life Sciences, Day teaches undergraduate and graduate chemistry courses and directs graduate research programs.

More Post Offices May Close In Future

Omaha (AP) — Charles Dickey, manager of the Postal Service's Omaha District, predicts that more small post offices will be closed when present postmasters retire.

A recent government study that recommended the Postal Service could save $100 million a year by closing some 12,000 small post offices hasn't resulted in any increase of closings so far in Dickey's district, which includes Nebraska and western Iowa.

"Small post offices are not economical to operate, but people understandably get emo-

Nebraska Accidents Kill Three

By United Press International
At least three persons died in Nebraska traffic accidents Sunday.

Killed early Sunday south of Lyons was Randy Nissen, 20, of rural Oakland, whose car went off U.S. 77 and struck a bridge.

In Omaha, Thomas J. Burns, 23, of Rural Route 3 at La Platte was fatally injured in a four-vehicle pileup at Interstate 80 and 13th Street inside the city limits.

The State Patrol said another person was killed in a traffic accident on Neb. 24 near Stanton but that the name of the victim was not immediately available.

The patrol said Burns was a passenger in a truck driven by Charles S. Newcomb, 22, of Omaha. Newcomb, along with the driver of another vehicle, had stopped to give assistance to Russell E. Ritter, 23, of Omaha, whose car had struck a wall after Ritter fell asleep. While Newcomb and the other driver—16-year-old Stephan D. Kallhoff of Omaha—were going to Ritter's assistance, a car driven by Donald E. Johnson, 52, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was involved in the pileup, the patrol said.

Burns was thrown from the Newcomb vehicle.

All Of Nebraska Has Winter Rain

A winter drizzle fell throughout Nebraska Sunday as temperatures dropped below freezing in much of the west.

The winter rain, which moved into Iowa early Sunday evening, dropped .49 inches in Lincoln.

Norfolk received the most precipitation, with 1.33 inches. Light snow mixed with rain was reported in Norfolk and Grand Island Sunday afternoon.

Valentine and Sidney recorded the state lows for the day at 30 degrees, and Omaha had the state high with 55.

unrestricted, for use to support UNL research by undergraduate and graduate students, for teaching, for initiating new teaching or research programs and for buying equipment. He said he'll apply the funds as broadly as possible.

Day intends to develop theoretical applications in bioinorganic, catalysis and molecular biology, explaining how systems work in inorganic and organometallic compounds, and examining structures of biologically significant molecules.

The award will assist Day in his teaching goal "to involve students rather than entertain them," and his research approach in which "the student works with me, not for me," as stated in his proposal.

Postdoctoral Work At MIT
Day earned his bachelors degree from Kentucky in 1965, his doctorate from Cornell in 1969 and did postdoctoral work at MIT, where he conducted research last summer.

"As a scientist, (Day) is most impressive for one at his age," Dr. Meisels wrote the foundation. "He is extremely productive and" in 2½ years at UNL has "been able to develop an independent and original research program."

As "one of the outstanding young chemical educators in the country today," Day also exhibits "special talent . . . required to keep the field fascinating" in teaching incoming science-oriented students as well as advanced chemistry majors, Meisels said.

tional when you want to close them," Dickey said.
He said "we won't close a post office if customers can't have the same or improved service."

One of the latest to be closed was the post office at Rosco. The Postal Service said the Roscoe office, which had 50 customers, was closed Aug. 29 and the closing will result in an annual saving of $9,240.

Dickey said 12 Nebraska and western Iowa post offices have been closed in the last four years and two have been converted to contract post offices.

Computing the cost at the time of the closings or conversions, Dickey said nearly $100,000 is saved annually. He said the 14 offices had a total of 511 customers.

He said Nebraska once had 1,300 post offices and now has 700.

Man Booked On Suspicion Of Homicide

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said a Kansas City man was booked on suspicion of homicide Saturday night in the death of Betty Jackson, 44, of Omaha.

Officers said she was shot outside the Admiral Theater.

Theater manager Joe Redmond said a man entered the theater and asked the cashier to call police. Officers said they found Miss Jackson slumped in the passenger seat of a car parked next to the theater. She was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Detective Robert Brisby said the man booked, Alvin Kirby, 49, told officers the shooting was accidental. He said he and Miss Jackson had been dating for 15 years and he would visit from Kansas City on weekends.

Discount Plans May Yield Little

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

What provides a possible dollar savings for some provides nothing but "economic balderdash" for others.

Labeled as economic balderdash by some consumer protection officials, discount buying organizations have actually persuaded people to pay several hundred dollars for so-called "lifetime memberships" for discount buying services.

And the organizations may promise nothing more than to save the consumer money off the list price of any item they can obtain for a member.

People fall for it and oftentimes are out the sizeable membership fee. They may never realize the promised savings — if they receive any services at all.

Comparison Suggested

If consumers would try to figure out actual savings by comparing prices offered by discount buying organizations with those of other retail outlets, "they might have second thoughts" about joining such an organization, according to Jerry Fennell.

Fennell, who is in charge of the consumer protection division of the office of Nebraska Attorney General Paul Douglas, cited the freezer-food plan as an example.

He said that for many such a plan is a convenience and "they are happy with it even if they don't save a dime."

However, if you are looking for real savings, you might look beyond the sales pitch.

According to Fennell, representatives of most food plans contend membership in the discount buying organization will cut food costs by 20%, but "if you pin them down, the facts can be interesting."

Many Variables Included

He said that the alleged 20% savings includes such items as savings on trips to the supermarket and cost of buying newspapers to read the grocery ads.

However, he notes, that a family must make at least one trip to the grocery store each week to buy fresh milk, lettuce and other perishables, and savings can be wiped out by the depreciation and operating costs of a freezer which is required in a freezer-food discount buying plan.

Anyone considering membership in such an organization which usually require a $700 or $800 fee should demand a price list of products from the company and take advantage of the three-day "cooling-off" period to compare those prices with those in regular supermarkets.

"If they don't provide you with a price list, refuse to do business with them," Fennell suggested.

Remember Entry Fee

In comparing prices, the consumer must also keep in mind that $700 or $800 membership fee which must be paid at the outset.

The tremendous amount of front money that is generated by group discount buying organizations is a major concern of attorney general offices throughout the country.

"They have your money and you have nothing at that point," Fennell said, pointing out that many of these companies have gone bankrupt and people are out their membership fees — many of which are large — and have received no service.

Discount buying organizations for farmers are presenting substantial problems in Nebraska, Fennell said. Many of these large firms have gone bankrupt and the consumers' membership fees are "down the drain."

"If the company goes under, there's nothing that can be done," he said.

The farmers discount buying organization plan usually says it can obtain, at a savings to the farmer, everything he needs in his business and personal life such as farm equipment, fertilizer, major appliances, etc.

Brands Limited

Some people have actually realized a savings in purchases and are well-satisfied, Fennell noted, but others have been misled to believe any name-brand product was available when in fact the number of available brands was limited.

One firm obtained more than $10,000 in down payments on fertilizer and refused to perform, while such a firm in Alabama obtained $500,000 in down payments which was lost to consumers when the company went bankrupt.

Discount Groups Have Deceptive Savings Claims

Savings claims are the most obvious deception involved in discount buying organizations.

And showing the deception in those savings claims plays a major role in actions pending in the State of Kentucky — where buying services originated.

According to Kentucky Assistant Attorney General Patrick Stallard, his office has retained the services of a marketing specialist who determines what is and is not possible in terms of savings.

In a telephone interview, Stallard said that the approach has been to get the script and sales pitch which these companies are presenting prospective members and then to compare that with actual savings.

"None of the buying services which require a substantial membership fee is legitimate," Stallard says, noting that "broad based savings are economically unrealistic."

"We have not taken the position that buying services cannot save you anything at anytime on any item," he said, but most prove to be "economically unrealistic."

The claim by many of these organizations that they're able to save the consumer money by cutting out the middleman is "ludicrous," according to Stallard.

He notes that these people are merely substituting themselves for a retailer and "they don't eliminate anybody."

In most of these so-called savings organizations, many brands and kinds of articles are not available, and delivery time "are always exaggerated," he said.

He said three cases combined into one action are slated for trial there in early 1978 — each involving a buying service for homeowners to obtain furniture, carpeting and appliances.

The membership fee was between $450 and $500 and the representatives of the organizations claimed that all major brands were available, Stallard said.

Noting that one's definition of major brands is a factor, he alleges that claims in terms of brands and types of items were never realized.

"I can get you anything you want and save you 50% on everything you buy," is the statement made by one representative, according to an affidavit obtained by Stallard.

Stallard said people falling for this type of sales pitch is "not difficult to understand" because the best way to deceive the public is "to take a little knowledge and distort it and extend it . . . and people buy it."

Unfortunately, those people who bought the sale pitch may never recover their losses — even if the case goes to trial and the consumer wins.

Stallard says the collection rate is low in these cases because most of these organizations "spend the money as fast as they get it, so the best we can hope for is stopping the activity."

Nebraska is looking at legislation of several states which have taken steps to control the operation of discount buying organizations.

Assistant Attorney General Jerry Fennell of Nebraska's Consumer Protection Office said that his office is studying proposed and adopted legislation of other states as well as a proposal submitted by the Farm Group Purchasing Organization.

He said Minnesota law limits the maximum large payment on fees, while Iowa requires that all advance membership fees be submitted to the insurance commission of the state instead of being held by the discount buying organization.

The Farm Group Purchasing Organization, according to Fennell, has submitted a rough draft of a law regulating discount buying organizations because it is fearful that the reputable groups will be put out of business by the many questionable operations.

The group's proposal provides for a $50,000 bond to be filed by every discount buying organization doing business in Nebraska.

It also provides a requirement that every discount buying organization disclose to potential customers in writing the nature of the services it provides, a current list of 100 items, identified by brand name, model and total price, which are sold by or through the organization.

Dad Must Stay Home

Topsfield, Mass. (UPI) — The father of a 16-year-old accused shoplifter is serving a 30-day sentence — of dinners at home.

Salem District Judge Samuel E. Zoll, 41, imposed the sentence on the advice of probation officers.

Zoll ordered the father of the Masconomet Regional High School student to be home between 5 and 7 p.m. every night. Their names were not released because a juvenile was involved.

"We feel that the medicine the doctor ordered was for the family to spend some time together, preferably at the dinner hour," said Robert Wright, a probate officer.

"We felt the father should be at home. If he's at home at a certain hour, everybody knows where he is. We aimed for him to be at home for a meal where he could sit down and talk with his family."

Wright said the main enforcement mechanism will be trust, but noted "in a small community, they are highly visible."

Zoll has a reputation for innovative sentences which bypass traditional punishment. He many times will sentence youths involved in breaking and entering, larceny and vandalism to work in hospitals, for the Red Cross, or the street department of the city work force.

HEW Tip Was False

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column that wives who have been deserted by their husbands and who have had to go on welfare to support their families should write to the Parent Locator Service, in care of the Health, Education and Welfare Office in Washington, D.C.

You said that department would locate the absent parents through Social Security records, and they would inform the wife of her husband's whereabouts. (In the past, such information was considered confidential, and the department refused to give it out.)

Well, I followed your advice, and the HEW wrote back saying they were sorry but they couldn't help me. How come? Thanks for nothing.

DESERTED IN TEXAS

DEAR DESERTE: Last August, a spokesman for the HEW wrote to advise me that the whereabouts of an absent spouse would no longer be confidential if he deserted his family and failed to meet his financial obligations. I was advised to inform my readers to write to the HEW in Washington, D.C., for assistance in locating absent spouses.

After that item appeared in my column, the HEW in Washington, D.C., was inundated with requests for help. All were refused.

When I demanded an explanation, they apologetically told me that such a bill had been passed, but that Congress had failed to appropriate the funds to provide that service — and then asked that I please inform deserted wives to apply to their state welfare department for assistance in locating an absent spouse.

The bidding:

5♣ Dble Pass Pass

Opening lead - king of hearts.

Here is a hand from the Spingold team of four champions. It features the enormous advantage sometimes derived from bold preemptive bidding.

At the first table, South opened the bidding with five clubs. He realized, of course, that this was a risky bid, vulnerable, but he decided to go all out in trying to put maximum pressure on his opponents.

His strategy proved successful when West found himself faced with a somewhat difficult decision. He had to choose from three alternatives — whether to pass, double or bid five hearts — and any one of the three could easily have turned out to be right or wrong.

West elected to double, and he led the king of hearts. Declarer ruffed and had no trouble at all making the contract for a score of 750 points. West could have beaten the contract had he led his singleton spade and later put partner on lead with a diamond in order to obtain a spade ruff.

At the second table, the bidding went:

South West North East
4♣ 4♥ Dble Redble
Pass Pass Pass

Here South rather more cautiously opened the bidding with only four clubs. This gave West room to bid four hearts — and now it was North who was faced with a problem. He could pass, double or bid five clubs, and all these actions were quite reasonable possibilities.

North elected to double, East chose to redouble, and that was the end of the matter. West made the contract, redoubled, for a score of 1,030 points — he lost a spade, a diamond and a club — and the outcome was that the successful team gained 1,780 points on this one deal.

Discount Plans May Yield Little

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

What provides a possible dollar savings for some provides nothing but "economic balderdash" for others.

Labeled as economic balderdash by some consumer protection officials, discount buying organizations have actually persuaded people to pay several hundred dollars for so-called "lifetime memberships" for discount buying services.

And the organizations may promise nothing more than to save the consumer money off the list price of any item they can obtain for a member.

People fall for it and oftentimes are out the sizeable membership fee. They may never realize the promised savings — if they receive any services at all.

Comparison Suggested

If consumers would try to figure out actual savings by comparing prices offered by discount buying organizations with those of other retail outlets, "they might have second thoughts" about joining such an organization, according to Jerry Fennell.

Fennell, who is in charge of the consumer protection division of the office of Nebraska Attorney General Paul Douglas, cited the freezer-food plan as an example.

He said that for many such a plan is a convenience and "they are happy with it even if they don't save a dime."

However, if you are looking for real savings, you might look beyond the sales pitch.

According to Fennell, representatives of most food plans contend membership in the discount buying organization will cut food costs by 20%, but "if you pin them down, the facts can be interesting."

Many Variables Included

He said that the alleged 20% savings includes such items as savings on trips to the supermarket and cost of buying newspapers to read the grocery ads.

However, he notes, that a family must make at least one trip to the grocery store each week to buy fresh milk, lettuce and other perishables, and savings can be wiped out by the depreciation and operating costs of a freezer which is required in a freezer-food discount buying plan.

Anyone considering membership in such an organization which usually require a $700 or $800 fee should demand a price list of products from the company and take advantage of the three-day "cooling-off" period to compare those prices with those in regular supermarkets.

"If they don't provide you with a price list, refuse to do business with them," Fennell suggested.

Remember Entry Fee

In comparing prices, the consumer must also keep in mind that $700 or $800 membership fee which must be paid at the outset.

The tremendous amount of front money that is generated by group discount buying organizations is a major concern of attorney general offices throughout the country.

"They have your money and you have nothing at that point," Fennell said, pointing out that many of these companies have gone bankrupt and people are out their membership fees — many of which are large — and have received no service.

Discount buying organizations for farmers are presenting substantial problems in Nebraska, Fennell said. Many of these large firms have gone bankrupt and the consumers' membership fees are "down the drain."

"If the company goes under, there's nothing that can be done," he said.

The farmers discount buying organization plan usually says it can obtain, at a savings to the farmer, everything he needs in his business and personal life such as farm equipment, fertilizer, major appliances, etc.

Brands Limited

Some people have actually realized a savings in purchases and are well-satisfied, Fennell noted, but others have been misled to believe any name-brand product was available when in fact the number of available brands was limited.

One firm obtained more than $10,000 in down payments on fertilizer and refused to perform, while such a firm in Alabama obtained $500,000 in down payments which was lost to consumers when the company went bankrupt.

Discount Groups Have Deceptive Savings Claims

Savings claims are the most obvious deception involved in discount buying organizations.

And showing the deception in those savings claims plays a major role in actions pending in the State of Kentucky — where buying services originated.

According to Kentucky Assistant Attorney General Patrick Stallard, his office has retained the services of a marketing specialist who determines what is and is not possible in terms of savings.

In a telephone interview, Stallard said that the approach has been to get the script and sales pitch which these companies are presenting prospective members and then to compare that with actual savings.

"None of the buying services which require a substantial membership fee is legitimate," Stallard says, noting that "broad based savings are economically unrealistic."

"We have not taken the position that buying services cannot save you anything at anytime on any item," he said, but most prove to be "economically unrealistic."

The claim by many of these organizations that they're able to save the consumer money by cutting out the middleman is "ludicrous," according to Stallard.

He notes that these people are merely substituting themselves for a retailer and "they don't eliminate anybody."

In most of these so-called savings organizations, many brands and kinds of articles are not available, and delivery time "are always exaggerated," he said.

He said three cases combined into one action are slated for trial there in early 1976 — each involving a buying service for homeowners to obtain furniture, carpeting and appliances.

The membership fee was between $450 and $500 and the representatives of the organizations claimed that all major brands were available, Stallard said.

Noting that one's definition of major brands is a factor, he alleges that claims in terms of brands and types of items were never realized.

"I can get you anything you want and save you 50% on everything you buy," is the statement made by one representative, according to an affidavit obtained by Stallard.

Stallard said people falling for this type of sales pitch is "not difficult to understand" because the best way to deceive the public is "to take a little knowledge and distort it and extend it... and people buy it."

Unfortunately, those people who bought the sale pitch may never recover their losses — even if the case goes to trial and the consumer wins.

Stallard says the collection rate is low in these cases because most of these organizations "spend the money as fast as they get it, so the best we can hope for is stopping the activity."

Nebraska is looking at legislation of several states which have taken steps to control the operation of discount buying organizations.

Assistant Attorney General Jerry Fennell of Nebraska's Consumer Protection Office said that his office is studying proposed and adopted legislation of other states as well as a proposal submitted by the Farm Group Purchasing Organization.

He said Minnesota law limits the maximum large payment on fees, while Iowa requires that all advance membership fees be submitted to the insurance commission of the state instead of being held by the discount buying organization.

The Farm Group Purchasing Organization, according to Fennell, has submitted a rough draft of a law regulating discount buying organizations because it is fearful that the reputable groups will be put out of business by the many questionable operations.

The group's proposal provides for a $50,000 bond to be filed by every discount buying organization doing business in Nebraska.

Study Shows Bad Year For Stockmen, Dairymen

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

It may be cheaper to produce corn and soybeans on dry land in Nebraska than under irrigation — assuming it rains enough to produce a crop — according to a study by UNL agricultural economists.

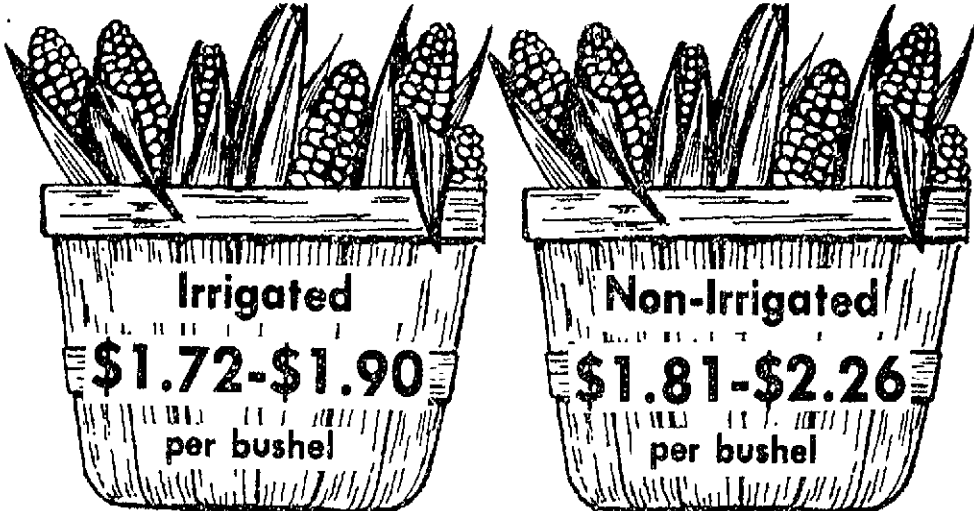

The study also shows that many cattle producers lost a lot of money and that dairymen had an especially grim year during 1975.

The data shows a wide variation in the income of farmers using differing methods of raising livestock and in the cost of producing a bushel of grain in different parts of Nebraska.

Costs Estimated
The data was assembled in late 1974 on the basis of estimated costs for producing the 1975 crop. Similar data is being gathered for use in a new report, which estimates the cost of growing crops and producing livestock in 1976 in Nebraska.

Dr. Phil Henderson said, "We were a little low on fertilizer and somewhat high on the cost of corn in cattle feed, but for comparison purposes, the figures are pretty close to what actually happened in 1975 to farmers' pocketbooks."

The cost estimates were based on "typical" farming practices used in five areas of the state but the farmers whose records were used in the study may have been somewhat above average operators.

"One other factor we put in the reports was a cost of management factor. When we try to communicate costs to non-farmers, they think of things like a car which has a management cost built in so we put one in," Henderson said.

Henderson noted that the report is prepared so a farmer can substitute his costs for those used in the report to arrive at his cost of production.

Variations Noted
"Actual cost of production will vary greatly from one farm to another, depending on yield. Input cost for corn is based on a per acre figure which doesn't vary much whether you harvest 40 or 80 bushels of corn," Henderson said.

The figures demonstrate the great variation in costs and return for growing corn across the state:

Area of the State	Farming Method	Cost of Corn per bu.
Panhandle	ditch irrigation	$1.83
Southwest	gravity irrigated	$1.72
Southwest	center pivot irrigated	$1.90
Central	gravity irrigated	$1.84
Central	nonirrigated	$2.26
Northwest	nonirrigated	$1.83
East	nonirrigated	$1.81

Wheat costs also vary

Panhandle stubble mulch fallow $2.55

Panhandle black fallow $2.58

Southwest stubble mulch fallow $2.93

Southwest clean fallow $3.22

Central continuous cropped $2.56

Central summer fallow $3.48

East nonirrigated $2.79

Soybeans are not grown in all areas of the state but costs vary

with the method of production and irrigation is unprofitable:

Central	gravity irrigated	$4.39
Northwest	nonirrigated	$3.42
East	nonirrigated	$3.39

Grain sorghum is a more profitable crop on dry land in eastern Nebraska than in central Nebraska because of much higher yields and better stalk grazing for livestock:

Area	Grain Sorghum	Price
East	dryland	$1.67
Central	dryland	$1.94

Livestock data included is based on several cost options. However, using a corn price of $3 a bushel, the economists painted this economic picture of livestock farmers:

—The feeding of a yearling steer to market weight would produce a profit per head of $41.19.

—The feeding of a 500-pound steer calf to market weight would have produced a loss of $7.79. If you include a fee for labor and management, the loss would be $26.04.

—A 400-pound steer calf fed out on a silage ration would produce an income of $15.41 but a 650-pound yearling on the same ration would produce a return of $45.50.

—If a farmer bought a 500-pound steer, put it on grass and sold it at 780 pounds, he would lose $4.23 per head plus his summer's work. Total loss would be $9.54 per head.

Picture Source

The income situation for farmers wintering and grazing steer calves from weaning to the following fall produced a worse picture. The loss figures is $57.12 per head on cattle gaining a half pound a day. Ironically, if the animal gained a pound a day, the loss per head is $78.26.

Wintering calves on drought-stricken corn silage produced a loss of $62.46; on corn silage, a loss of $94.08, and on alfalfa hay and chopped stalks, the loss was $80.62 per head.

A hay ration that would put on a half pound of grain per day ended up producing a loss of $85.93 per head.

The cost of keeping a beef bull to breed 30 cows was estimated to be $15.60 per cow bred.

Ranchers wintering cattle on stalks and hay were losing $120.91 per head, while those who grazed stalks and fed stacked stalks in bad weather ended up losing $112.35 per head.

If the rancher grazed his cattle on grass pasture, a minimum of hay and protein cake, he lost $132.74 per cow. If he fed more hay and supplemented it with cake, he lost $117.24 per head.

Figures Debatable

Since the charges vary for pasture, the figures are debatable but no one argues that the rancher made a profit.

Hog producers ended up with a $61.12 return for a sow and two litters. If the pigs were grown to market weight, a profit of $21.63 if they sold the pigs as feeder pigs, and a profit of $2.72 per head if they fed feeder pigs to market weights.

Dairymen had a grim year as well. Costs ran $131.75 more than income for farmers producing 12,000 pounds of milk and farmers producing only 9,000 pounds of milk (per cow) lost $238.85 on their cattle.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The current drop in prices which farmers find alarming is due to rain on wheatland in Kansas — as I predicted — and to the sudden harvest of the largest crop on record.

There simply isn't enough storage on farms and in elevators to handle the glut of corn. Illinois has 5 million bushels piled on the ground with more coming from the fields.

With no place to store the grain, farmers must sell it anywhere they can. This is creating a pricing disaster for farmers in states where there is adequate storage. Prices are at or below the cost of production in many areas already.

There is some hope that once the glut is gone, the price will recover. Grain producer groups are already calling on their members to hold for higher prices.

Export figures indicate we are moving much larger amounts of wheat and corn into world markets than we did a year ago.

Russia is apparently going to switch its order for barley to corn to the tune of 1.1 million metric tonnes. They also appear to be going to divert some of their overseas purchases to the United States on an "any option" basis.

Western European crops are reported to be 10% below normal, with an unanticipated increase in their livestock feeding operations.

Livestock feeders, pork producers and poultrymen are gearing back up to produce meat. Dairymen are increasing feeding schedules in this country, so it is too early to throw in the towel on grain prices.

One-Third Of Farmers Asked For Future Plans

Late this fall the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics will be asking one of every three farmers to participate in crop and livestock surveys.

Division Director Doug Murfield said all data collected will be kept confidential.

The first set of questionnaires will go out Nov. 13, and some farmers will be contacted by phone or personally.

Murfield said the surveys are the most important of those conducted annually. He explained farmers' cooperation will mean reliable estimates on acreage and livestock numbers for their counties and will aid them in making and adjusting production and marketing plans.

These estimates, Murfield said, will provide the first clues on the 1976 livestock, poultry and winter wheat production. Information from the surveys will be used in preparing final estimates of acreage and yield of row crops, estimates of cattle, hogs and sheep numbers, and winter wheat plantings.

Estimates will be made available in December for wheat, hogs and poultry, in January for row crops and in early February for cattle.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The buffalo will once again roam land managed by the Bureau of Land Management in the Department of the Interior. It seems a sheep company that owned 19 buffalo wanted to graze the big woolies along with their little ones, but some bureaucrat said no dice. However, second thoughts by a higher ranking individual produced permission.

The idea of buffalo eating grass in the same area as sheep will probably be an effective deterrent to a sudden immigration of sheepherders, but on the other hand, if the big fellers could be trained to chase coyotes, those sheep would be the safest in America.

Waves of horseflies have suddenly appeared in Louisiana, attacking livestock and spreading a disease known as anaplasmosis.

The disease is often fatal and is believed spread by the bites of horseflies. The flies do bite humans but apparently the disease doesn't affect them.

John Rust, a veterinarian from Shreveport, reports that swarms of flies in the late afternoon appear almost like a horde of grasshoppers.

Hundreds of cattle are said to have died between Summer Grove and Coushatta, La. from the disease.

A survey by the Wallace Farmer may explain why farmers haven't rushed back into pork production after experiencing record high prices. The Iowa farm magazine discovered that 28% of the farmers who raise hogs feel hog prices will drop to $42 by January.

Only 7% of those surveyed felt hogs would be $51 in January, and some predicted prices as low as $30 per hundred weight — less than half of current prices.

Why the low prediction for prices was not explained. Possibly the statements by economists that hog prices are going to stay high are not believed, or perhaps farmers like to try to confuse things by telling pollsters that they expect low prices when they anticipate high ones.

A reader in the Des Moines Register wrote to inform his paper that the so-called meat stretchers are often more expensive than meat itself.

It seems that hamburger was selling for 69¢ a pound the same time the product designed to stretch hamburger was selling for $1.76 a pound.

I have noticed the same thing in some of the egg substitutes that cost more than eggs and provide less nutrition.

There are a lot of ways to save money on feeding and clothing your family but they aren't likely to come from the pretty package in the store.

Several ladies have called me since I wrote a story about a flour mill that turns whole wheat into raw material for bread.

Apparently there are a number of women in Lincoln who wash their own wheat and grind it for flour. They make home-made bread at a cost of a dime a loaf or less.

Farmers can have bad years and mediocre years but no more good years, or so seems the goal of the grain agreement with Russia.

It means an end to the hope for $5 wheat, $12 soybeans, $4 corn and other similar good news until the cost of production forces farmers to quit raising grain at prices lower than these levels.

Farm groups are disappointed with the agreement because it eliminates any chance of a windfall in the market place.

A clause in the agreement which permits the U.S. to reduce sales to the Soviet Union if we have a short crop here removes any opportunity to offset a poor crop by higher prices for the grain produced.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz told Governor J. James Exon at Omaha that "you will be pleased with the grain agreement when it is announced."

Farmers pleasure has been dimmed by continued erosion of grain prices to the point that some can no longer show a profit if they sell their crop at today's prices.

Farm costs certainly are going to go up again next year. Some estimates that stand up well under scrutiny suggest that the cost of fuel alone will increase the cost of producing a bushel of corn by about 20¢ in the next crop year.

The increasing cost of farm machinery, electricity, seed, fertilizer, chemicals and all the other farm expenses will force farmers into bankruptcy unless the federal government steps in with some kind of guaranteed price system soon.

Profit Reaped

Singapore (UPI) — Singapore Airlines reaped a pre-tax profit of $16.15 million in its fiscal year ending March 31, Chairman J.Y.M. Pillay announced in an annual report.

The profit, a 0.9% growth over the last fiscal year, came despite the world economic recession and the big jump in fuel prices, he said.

Dawson County 4-H Meat Team State's Delegate

The Dawson County 4-H Meats Team will represent Nebraska Wednesday in the National Meats Judging Contest in Kansas City in connection with the 77th annual American Royal Livestock Show.

The contest will be at the Safeway Warehouse in Kansas City, Kan. and at the Livestock Exchange Building in Kansas City, Mo.

Team members making the trip are Roz Buddenberg, son of Mr. & Mrs. Robert Buddenberg of Gothenburg; Steve Gierhan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Gierhan of Lexington; Tim Matthies, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Matthies of Gothenburg and Deb Pedersen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Pedersen of Lexington.

The team will be accompanied by Dave Stenberg, Dawson County Extension Agent, and the parents of the team.

Manila Draws More

Manila (UPI) — Foreign tourist arrivals in Manila during the first eight months of 1975 reached 329,571, up 34.65% from the period last year. The tourism department said the trend indicates that tourist arrivals will exceed the expected 500,000 visitors for 1975.

Study Shows Bad Year For Stockmen, Dairymen

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

It may be cheaper to produce corn and soybeans on dry land in Nebraska than under irrigation — assuming it rains enough to produce a crop — according to a study by UNL agricultural economists.

The study also shows that many cattle producers lost a lot of money and that dairymen had an especially grim year during 1975.

The data shows a wide variation in the income of farmers using differing methods of raising livestock and in the cost of producing a bushel of grain in different parts of Nebraska.

Costs Estimated
The data was assembled in late 1974 on the basis of estimated costs for producing the 1975 crop. Similar data is being gathered for use in a new report, which estimates the cost of growing crops and producing livestock in 1976 in Nebraska.

Dr. Phil Henderson said, "We were a little low on fertilizer and somewhat high on the cost of corn in cattle feed, but for comparison purposes, the figures are pretty close to what actually happened in 1975 to farmers' pocketbooks."

The cost estimates were based on "typical" farming practices used in five areas of the state but the farmers whose records were used in the study may have been somewhat above average operators.

"One other factor we put in the reports was a cost of management factor. When we try to communicate costs to non-farmers, they think of things like a car which has a management cost built in so we put one in," Henderson said.

Henderson noted that the report is prepared so a farmer can substitute his costs for those used in the report to arrive at his cost of production.

Variations Noted
"Actual cost of production will vary greatly from one farm to another, depending on yield. Input cost for corn is based on a per acre figure which doesn't vary much whether you harvest 40 or 80 bushels of corn," Henderson said.

The figures demonstrate the great variation in costs and return for growing corn across the state:

Area of the State	Farming Method	Cost of Corn per Bu.
Panhandle	ditch irrigation	$1.83
Southwest	gravity irrigated	$1.72
Southwest	center pivot irrigated	$1.90
Central	gravity irrigated	$1.84
Central	nonirrigated	$2.26
Northeast	nonirrigated	$1.83
East	nonirrigated	$1.81

Wheat costs also vary:

Panhandle	stubble mulch fallow	$2.55
Panhandle	black fallow	$2.58
Panhandle	stubble mulch fallow	$2.93
Southwest	clean till fallow	$3.22
Central	continuous cropped	$2.56
Central	summer fallow	$3.48
East	nonirrigated	$2.79

Soybeans are not grown in all areas of the state but costs vary

with the method of production and irrigation is unprofitable:

Central	gravity irrigated	$4.39
Northeast	nonirrigated	$3.42
East	nonirrigated	$3.39

Grain sorghum is a more profitable crop on dry land in eastern Nebraska than in central Nebraska because of much higher yields and better stalk grazing for livestock:

Livestock data included is based on several cost options. However, using a corn price of $3 a bushel, the economists painted this economic picture of livestock farmers:

—The feeding of a yearling steer to market weight would produce a profit per head of $41.19.

—The feeding of a 500-pound steer calf to market weight would have produced a loss of $7.79. If you include a fee for labor and management, the loss would be $26.04.

—A 400-pound steer calf fed out on a silage ration would produce an income of $15.41 but a 650-pound yearling on the same ration would produce a return of $45.50.

—If a farmer bought a 500-pound steer, put it on grass and sold it at 780 pounds, he would lose $4.23 per head plus his summer's work. Total loss would be $9.54 per head.

Picture Worse

The income situation for farmers wintering and grazing steer calves from weaning to the following fall produced a worse picture. The loss figures is $57.12 per head on cattle gaining a half pound a day. Ironically, if the animal gained a pound a day, the loss per head is $78.26.

Wintering calves on drought-stricken corn silage produced a loss of $62.46; on corn silage, a loss of $94.08, and on alfalfa hay and chopped stalks, the loss was $80.62 per head.

A hay ration that would put on a half pound of grain per day ended up producing a loss of $85.93 per head.

The cost of keeping a beef bull to breed 30 cows was estimated to be $15.60 per cow bred.

Ranchers wintering cattle on stalks and hay were losing $120.91 per head, while those who grazed stalks and fed stacked stalks in bad weather ended up losing $112.35 per head.

If the rancher grazed his cattle on grass pasture, a minimum of hay and protein cake, he lost $132.74 per cow. If he fed more hay and supplemented it with cake, he lost $117.24 per head.

Figures Debatable

Since the charges vary for pasture, the figures are debatable but no one argues that the rancher made a profit.

Hog producers ended up with a $61.12 return for a sow and two litters. If the pigs were grown to make weight; a profit of $21.63 if they sold the pigs as feeder pigs, and a profit of $2.72 per head if they fed feeder pigs to market weights.

Dairymen had a grim year as well. Costs ran $131.75 more than income for farmers producing 12,000 pounds of milk and farmers producing only 9,000 pounds of milk (per cow) lost $298.85 on their cattle.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The current drop in prices which farmers find alarming is due to rain on wheatland in Kansas — as I predicted — and to the sudden harvest of the largest crop on record.

There simply isn't enough storage on farms and in elevators to handle the glut of corn. Illinois has 5 million bushels piled on the ground with more coming from the fields.

With no place to store the grain, farmers must sell it anywhere they can. This is creating a pricing disaster for farmers in states where there is adequate storage. Prices are at or below the cost of production in many areas already.

There is some hope that once the glut is gone, the price will recover. Grain producer groups are already calling on their members to hold for higher prices.

Export figures indicate we are moving much larger amounts of wheat and corn into world markets than we did a year ago.

Russia is apparently going to switch its order for barley to corn to the tune of 1.1 million metric tonnes. They also appear to be going to divert some of their overseas purchases to the United States on an "any option" basis.

Western European crops are reported to be 10% below normal, with an unanticipated increase in their livestock feeding operations.

Livestock feeders, pork producers and poultrymen are gearing back up to produce meat. Dairymen are increasing feeding schedules in this country, so it is too early to throw in the towel on grain prices.

One-Third Of Farmers Asked For Future Plans

Late this fall the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics will be asking one of every three farmers to participate in crop and livestock surveys.

Division Director Doug Murfield said all data collected will be kept confidential.

The first set of questionnaires will go out Nov. 13, and some farmers will be contacted by phone or personally.

Murfield said the surveys are the most important of those conducted annually. He explained farmers' cooperation will mean reliable estimates on acreage and livestock numbers for their counties and will aid them in making and adjusting production and marketing plans.

These estimates, Murfield said, will provide the first clues on the 1976 livestock, poultry and winter wheat production. Information from the surveys will be used in preparing final estimates of acreage and yield of row crops, estimates of cattle, hogs and sheep numbers, and winter wheat plantings.

Estimates will be made available in December for wheat, hogs and poultry, in January for row crops and in early February for cattle.

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Prosecution testimony in the U.S. District Court trial of Bernardo Escamilla of Scottsbluff, Neb., is to resume in Council Bluffs Monday.

The trial before Judge Barron McCune is the second in Council Bluffs involving incidents in the 1973 Indian takeover of Wounded Knee, S.D.

Escamilla, 28, also was the defendant in the previous trial in March. Escamilla was found innocent of robbery and using a firearm, but was convicted of simple assault and is appealing that verdict.

He is charged in the current trial with two counts of assaulting a federal officer, conspiracy to assault and possession of a gun during a felony.

A court official said testimony started last Tuesday and was halted after Thursday afternoon because certain witnesses would not be available Friday.

Iowa Man Pays $2,110 An Acre

LaPorte City, Iowa (UPI) — A rural LaPorte City man, Dean Fehl, has paid a record price for farm land in Benton County, purchasing a neighbor's farm for a total of $168,800.

Schmitz Real Estate of Van Horn reported selling the 80-acre farm, located about six miles south of here, at $2,110 per acre.

The State Roads Dept. has announced apparent low bidders on more than $13 million worth of highway construction and improvement projects.

One of the biggest single projects is a $1.8 million improvement of 8.3 miles of U.S. 73 east and west of Verdon in Richardson County. Apparent low bidder on the paving and lighting portion was Fred Carlson Co. of Decorah, Iowa, with an offer of $1,775,000.

The letting brought the calendar year total to $81.5 million, $21 million more than for a comparable period last year.

Some of the other major projects in the letting, their location, type of work, contractor, and amount of bids:

Lancaster County To Spend $2.2 Million

About $2.2 million in road and bridge improvements are planned for Lancaster County over the coming year, according to a new one-year road and bridge plan prepared by the county engineer.

Many of the projects on the new plan, presented at a public information meeting last month, have already been started.

The engineer's office recently let a contract for 51 of the 59 bridges to be repaired or replaced with box or pipe culverts. The other eight will be repaired by the county engineering staff, said chief deputy Henry Graff.

Major paving projects to be started or completed in 1976 are 4.4 miles of W. Raymond Rd. north of Lincoln, 7.6 miles of No. and So. 84th St. and about two miles of No. 27th St.

The one-year plan and a tentative outline of improvements over the next six years will be presented during a public hearing, tentatively scheduled for Nov. 18 at 2:30 p.m. during the County Board's regular board meeting.

Businessmen Invited To Attend Pension Reform Act Workshop

"What Every Business and Professional Person Should Know About the 1974 Pension Reform Act" will be explained at a workshop for Nebraska businessmen Friday, in the Nebraska Union at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Highlight of the day-long workshop will be a luncheon address by the chief business advisor to President Gerald R. Ford, Secretary of Commerce Rogers Morton. He is scheduled to hold a news conference earlier in the day.

Morton, a former secretary of the interior, congressman and chairman of the Republican National Committee, has been secretary of commerce since May 1. In a recent news conference, President Ford announced that Morton had asked to leave the cabinet and return to private life after the first of the year.

The workshop which brings Morton to Lincoln will be considering interpretation of the compliance with the employee retirement income security act of 1974.

Important aspects of the act include provision for the protection of workers against loss of pension rights; liberalization of regulations in the area of retirement programs for the self-employed and establishment of an individual retirement account for persons who wish to invest portions of their earnings in a personal pension plan, according to Dean Ronald L. Smith of the NU College of Business Administration.

Smith and E. J. Faulkner, president of Woodmen Accident and Life Co., are co-chairmen of the workshop sponsoring committee.

About 300 persons are expected at the workshop. Registration is still being accepted on a first-come basis by the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

First speaker on the program will be Nebraska Sen. Carl T. Curtis, who is the author of the individual retirement account section of the retirement act. Sen. Curtis will discuss the legislative background leading to passage of the 1974 pension reform act.

During the morning session, Stephen G. Kellison, a consulting actuary from Dallas, Texas, will present an overview of the principal provisions, and L. Bruce Wright, a Lincoln attorney, will discuss regulations implementing the measure.

Morton will speak at a 12:30 p.m. luncheon in the Nebraska Union Ballroom. Interim NU

Chancellor Adam C. Breckenridge will preside at the luncheon.

The afternoon program will include talks by John J. Flittie, president of a Minneapolis actuarial firm, and by James J. O'Leary, vice chairman and chief economist of United States Trust Company in New York.

NU economics professor Dr. George E. Rejda will conduct a panel discussion that will include Sen. Curtis, Wright, Flittie, Kellison, Charles L. Saunders, Jr., deputy chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Service, and Don Moorehead, minority counsel of the Senate Finance Committee.

A reception will be held following the conference in the Nebraska Club, at 13th and M.

The workshop is being sponsored by the College of Business Administration, the U.S. Department of Commerce, the U.S. Small Business Administration, Nebraska Association of Commerce and Industry, Insurance Federation of Nebraska, Nebraska State Bankers Association, Nebraska Association of Certified Public Accountants, Nebraska State Bar Association and Nebraska Savings and Loan Association.

What Do Many Doctors Use When They Suffer Pain And Itch Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues?
Exclusive formula gives prompt, temporary relief from such pain and itch in many cases. Helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues due to inflammation.

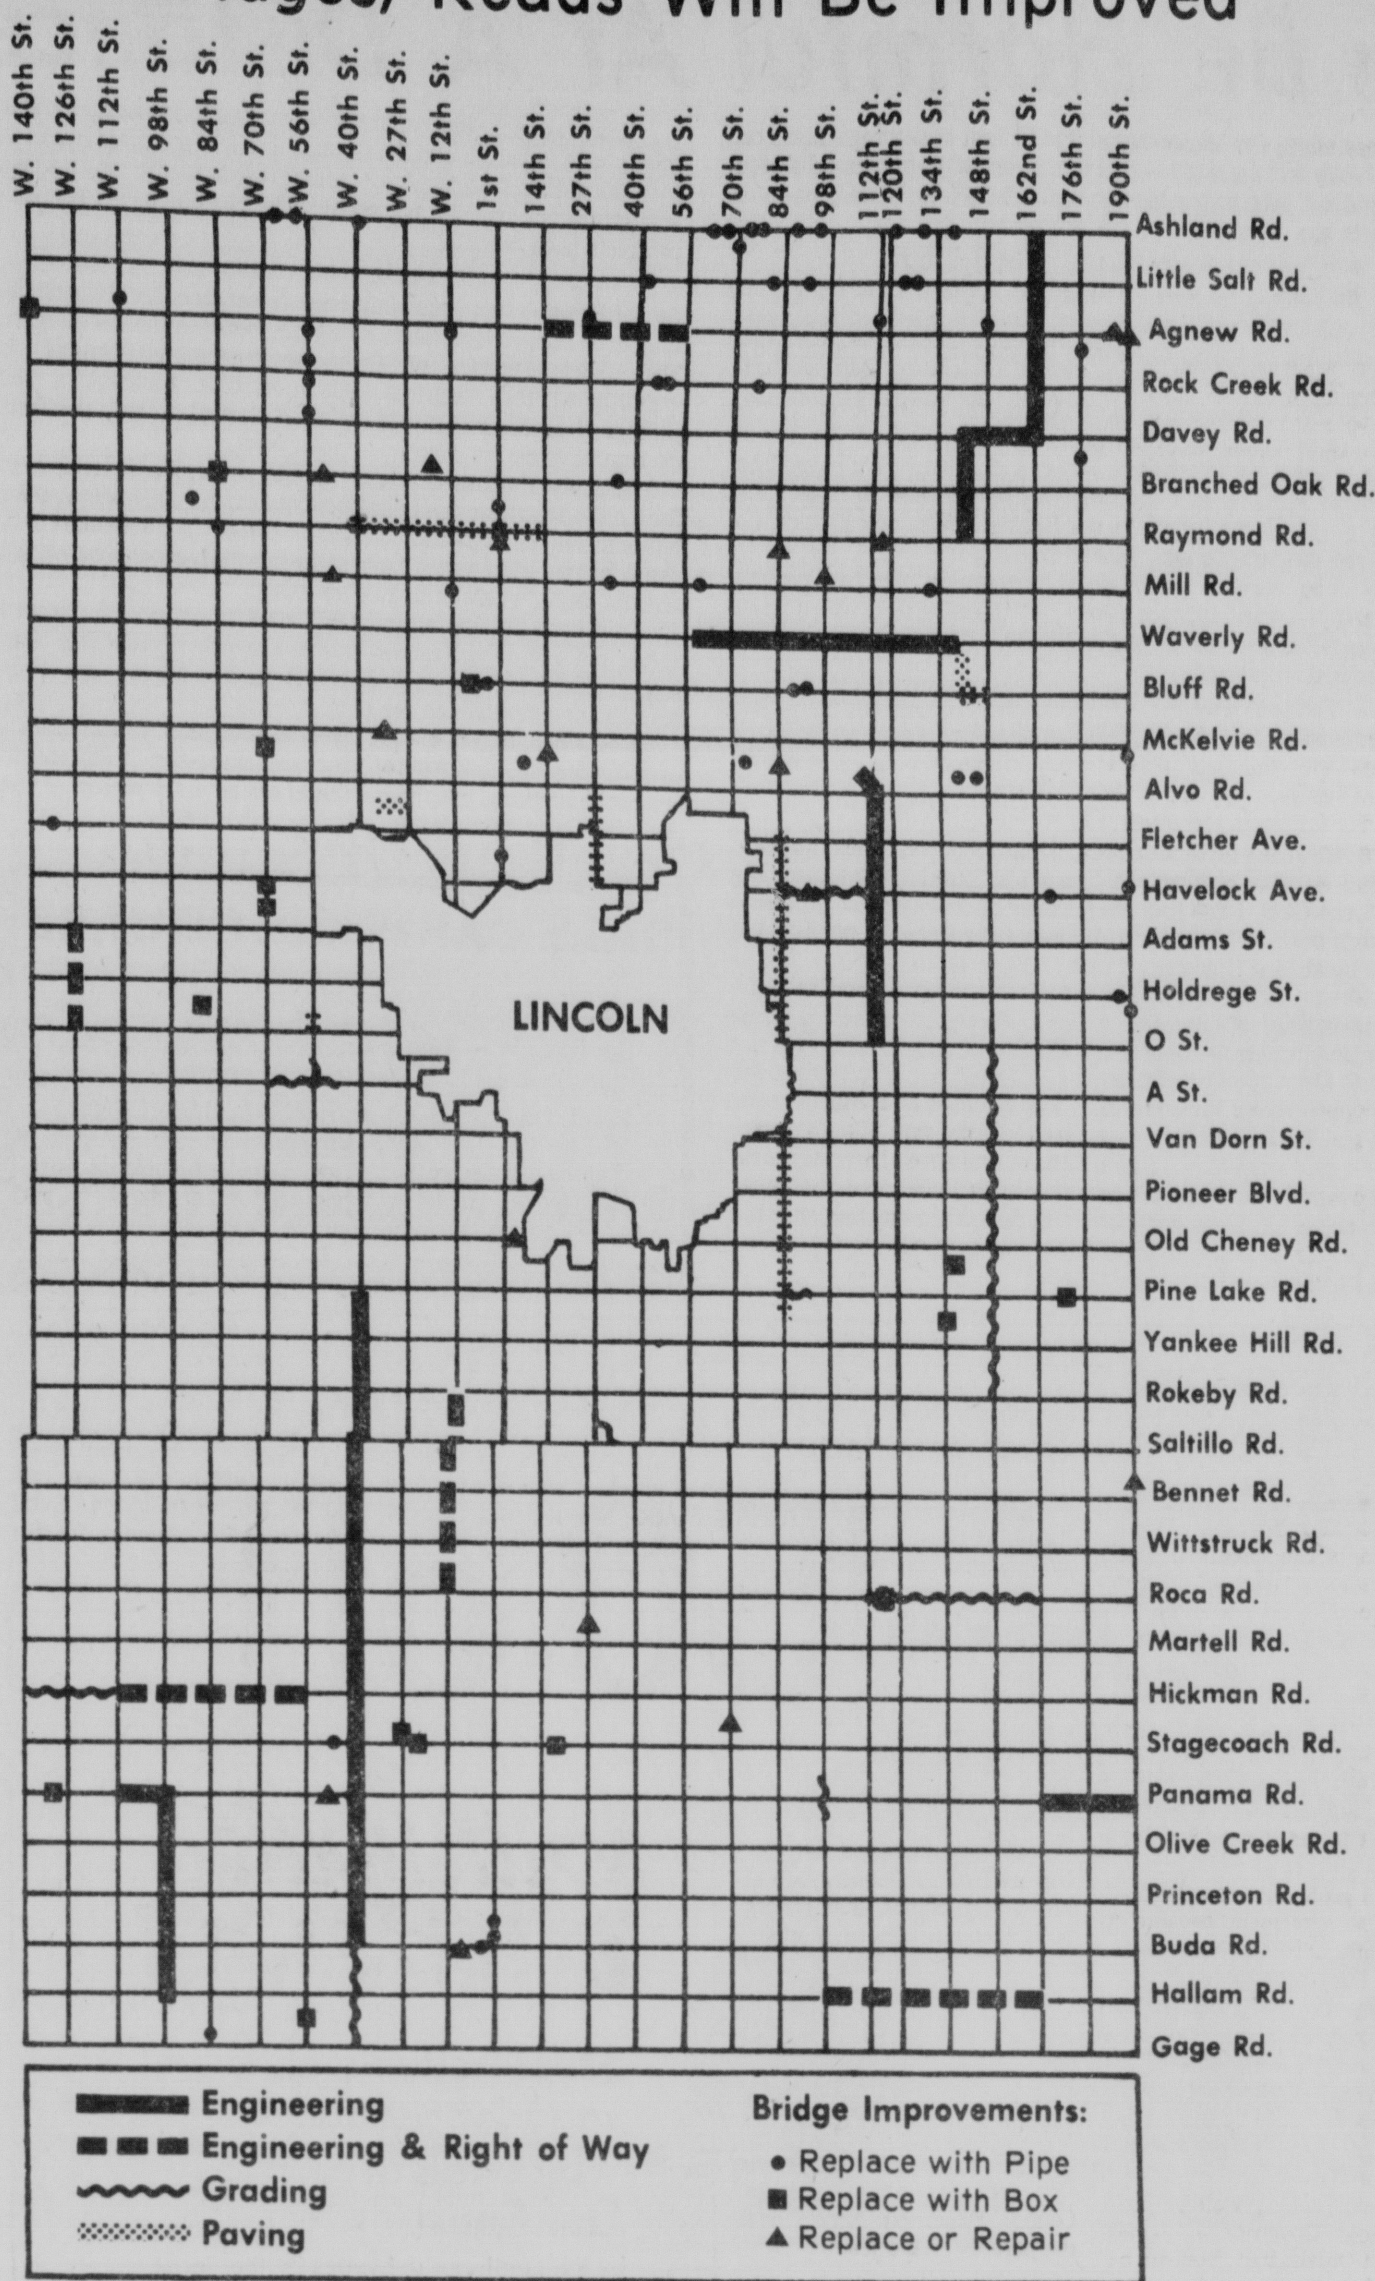

In a survey, doctors were asked what they use to relieve such painful symptoms. Many of the doctors reporting said they either use Preparation H themselves or in their office practice.

Preparation H gives prompt, temporary relief for hours in many cases from pain, itching in hemorrhoidal tissues. And it actually helps shrink painful swelling of such tissues when infected and inflamed. Try doctor-tested Preparation H. There's no other formula like it. At drug counters everywhere. Ointment or suppositories.

Judge Resumes Wounded Knee Takeover Trial

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Prosecution testimony in the U.S. District Court trial of Bernardo Escamilla of Scottsbluff, Neb., is to resume in Council Bluffs Monday.

The trial before Judge Barron McCune is the second in Council Bluffs involving incidents in the 1973 Indian takeover of Wounded Knee, S.D.

Escamilla, 28, also was the defendant in the previous trial in March. Escamilla was found innocent of robbery and using a firearm, but was convicted of simple assault and is appealing that verdict.

He is charged in the current trial with two counts of assaulting a federal officer, conspiracy to assault and possession of a gun during a felony.

A court official said testimony started last Tuesday and was halted after Thursday afternoon because certain witnesses would not be available Friday.

Iowa Man Pays $2,110 An Acre

LaPorte City, Iowa (UPI) — A rural LaPorte City man, Dean Fehl, has paid a record price for farm land in Benton County, purchasing a neighbor's farm for a total of $168,800.

Schmitz Real Estate of Van Horne reported selling the 80-acre farm, located about six miles south of here, at $2,110 per acre.

State Lets $13 Million In Bids

By United Press International

The State Roads Dept. has announced apparent low bidders on more than $13 million worth of highway construction and improvement projects.

One of the biggest single projects is a $1.8 million improvement of 8.3 miles of U.S. 73 east and west of Verdon in Richardson County. Apparent low bidder on the paving and lighting portion was Fred Carlson Co. of Decorah, Iowa, with an offer of $1,775,000.

The letting brought the calendar year total to $81.5 million, $21 million more than for a comparable period last year.

Some of the other major projects in the letting, their location, type of work, contractor, and amount of bids:

Clay Center south, Neb. 14, Clay County, 4 miles, grading, Van Buskirk Construction Co., Sioux City, Iowa, $419,122; bridge, Capital Bridge Co., Lincoln, $279,667.

Sparks to Norden, Neb. 12, Cherry and Keya Paha counties, 10.5 miles, grading, aggregates, detour, bituminous sand base course and armor coat, Missouri Valley Construction Co., Grand Island, $845,695.

Ultra-High-Voltage Lines May Be Harmful At A Distance

The New York Times

Ultra-high-voltage power lines that have been proliferating over the eastern United States are looming as a new environmental battleground — a source of electrical emissions suspected by some experts of being potentially harmful to humans and animals.

The Environmental Protection Agency's radiation division has opened a formal investigation to determine whether there are grounds for limiting the use of such lines or for imposing special precautions on public exposure.

Controversy over the suspected hazard has delayed the licensing of two proposed power lines in northern New York state, and protracted litigation has been blocking another project in Michigan.

There is no record of any person in the United States having been harmed by the heavy leakage of electricity from the ultra-powerful lines, carrying 765,000 volts, which constitute only 1,300 miles of the 100,000 miles of familiar "bulk" high-tension transmission lines that lace the country.

Adverse Effects Found

However, in the Soviet Union enough adverse physiological effects among workers on lines below the ultra-high-voltage level have been reported for the government there to have promulgated exposure limits, just as is done with radiation in the United States.

The ultra-high-voltage lines hum and crackle even louder than do the conventional transmission circuits. Noise levels of up to 60 decibels, comparable to city traffic, have been recorded under them.

The electric fields around the lines are strong enough so that if a person underneath one touches a sizable metal surface, such as the side of a vehicle, he can receive a pronounced shock. Engineers say there is no way of insulating overhead wires to prevent such leakage.

The lines carry alternating current, oscillating at the standard rate of 60 cycles a second. It is these fluctuations, combined with the strength of the current, that are thought to have harmful physiological effects.

Research Begun

Because of suspicions about possible adverse effects, the power industry in this country, five years after the introduction of ultra-high-voltage transmission in 1969, has begun a multimillion-dollar research program on physiological and other environmental implications of the leakage.

But, because transmission is progressively less expensive as voltage is stepped up, the industry is pressing ahead with experimentation on lines more than twice as powerful as the 765,000-volt level that is classified as ultra-high voltage.

Ultra-high-voltage lines are now operating in Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan. Nearly all belong to the American Electric Power Co., the nation's largest electric utility.

These are lines that run from major generating plants to electric companies' distributing centers. From there the current is reduced in steps to the 110-volt and 220-volt levels supplied to households.

Over Half Is 230 Kilovolt

Cross-country transmission began with 138,000-volt lines, in 1916. Then it went to 230,000 volts, which still account for more than half of the 100,000 miles of "bulk" cross-country lines. In 1953, American Electric Power put in the world's first 345,000-volt line, between Zanesville, Ohio, and Charleston, W. Va. The next jump was to 765,000 volts six years ago.

A 345,000-volt line can transmit five times as much power as a 138,000-volt line, and a 765,000-volt line 30 times as much, at a relatively small increase in installation cost.

This, the power industry notes, not only yields operating economies but greatly reduces the number of lines needed and the consequent disruption of the countryside.

Thousands Live Nearby

The 765,000-volt lines are slung from 150-foot towers and run about 40 feet above the ground along right-of-ways up to 250 feet wide. Thousands of people live, work and travel close to these lines.

Under state laws utility companies generally get the rights-of-way by condemnation, whether property owners like it or not. In general, there is no federal jurisdiction over power lines.

According to scientific papers that have been sent to this country, scientists in the Soviet Union several years ago studied 45 persons who had worked in 400,000-volt and 500,000-volt switchyards two to five hours a day for several years.

Forty-one of the 45 showed, immediately after exposure, certain physical symptoms, varying with length of exposure and persisting for several hours after exposure. These symptoms included "instability" of pulse and blood pressure, tremors of arms and legs, and sweating. About 30% of the male subjects reported diminished sexual vigor. Ten or more subjects showed slowed heartbeat, slowed electrical conduction in the heart and anemia.

These and similar observations led the Soviet Union in 1971 to set exposure limits for power-plant personnel.

Lab Conditions Not Met

Doctors in the United States consider the Soviet observations somewhat inconclusive because the study was not conducted under laboratory criteria, with unexposed individuals for comparison.

However, related studies in this country have convinced some researchers that ultra-high-voltage fields could have harmful effects.

Electrical fields below a line carrying 765,000 volts can reach a level technically described as 92 volts a centimeter. Electrical fields around household appliances range from 0.02 volts a centimeter near a light bulb to 0.3 volts near a color television set and 0.9 volt near a phonograph.

Dr. Andrew A. Marine, a biophysicist at the Syracuse Veterans Hospital, exposed rats for a month to a field of 150 volts a centimeter. They lost weight, their blood protein distribution was altered and certain glandular excretions were decreased — all symptoms considered undesirable.

In a deposition prepared for the New York State Public Service Commission, Dr. Marine noted that federal health regulations call for safety factors of 100 — that is, that exposure to harmful entities should not exceed one one-hundredth of the level at which adverse effects are observed.

1.5 Volt Limit Suggested

The 150-volt rat tests, he continued, suggested a working safety limit of 1.5 volts exposure. To keep within this limit, he said, a person would have to stay more than 100 yards from the center line of an ultra-high-voltage corridor.

On this basis he and a colleague, Dr. Robert O. Becker, a physician, recommended against licensing two proposed 765,000-volt lines — one a New York State Power Authority project to run from Utica to Messina, and the other a line between Rochester and Oswego jointly projected by the Rochester Gas and Electric Co. and the Niagara-Mohawk Power Co.

Public Service Commission hearings on the two projects opened last year and are going on intermittently, with the environmental aspects a major factor. The next sessions are scheduled for January.

The person who has been most active in bringing the ultra-high-voltage question to public notice is Louise B. Young of Winnetka, Ill., a physicist and former editor of scientific publications.

'Power Over People'

Mrs. Young became interested when a power company sought to run an ultra-high-voltage line across farmland she owned in southern Ohio. Her unsuccessful fight against the line led her to write a book on the subject, "Power Over People," published in 1973 by Oxford University Press.

She became involved as a witness in another power line battle in Livingston County in southern Michigan, in which some farmland owners are opposing a 765,000-volt project of the Detroit Edison Co. A county commission's denial of a permit on the ground of environmental imponderables was reversed by a county court, and an appeal from that ruling is before the state circuit court.

Some research in the late 1960s — challenged by critics as intentionally limited to the point of meaninglessness — yielded no evidence of ultra-high-voltage effects. Since then the position of the power industry, as ultra-high-voltage mileage multiplied, has been that no adverse effects are known.

However, mounting controversy impelled the industry some 18 months ago to launch quietly, through its Electric Power Research Institute at Palo Alto, Calif., a far-flung research program on which commitments currently aggregate some $2 million. Six research contracts have been let.

Research Increases

At Pennsylvania State University, researchers are studying the effects of high-voltage fields on plants, birds and small animals. The Illinois Institute of Technology's Research Institute is exploring whether electrical fields affect heart pacemakers. The Battelle Research Institute in Seattle is starting a study of effects on large animals.

At Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Dr. Donald Gamn for the last 18 months has been building a copper-shielded room for reproduction of high-tension electric fields and accustoming a group of test dogs and a baboon to intermittent exposures. No attempt has been made to analyze effects.

Last April the Environmental Protection Agency, in a formal notice in the Federal Register, solicited information on ultra-high-voltage effects and got some 50 responses. The agency says it has not had time to examine the data.

Meanwhile, one of the agency's radiation-monitoring vans has been making measurements of power-line emissions. The figures so far corroborate previous suppositions about the intensity of the electrical fields they create.

Write-In Winners Reluctant But They Won't Shirk Their Duty

MEDINA, Tenn. (AP) — They held an election and almost nobody ran. But reluctant city officials named by write-in votes have now grudgingly agreed to serve new terms.

"It's just got to where it's too much of a headache," said Marcus Willford, elected by 123 write-in votes to a third two-year term as the $100-per-month mayor in the farming and railroad town, population 800.

"Really, there's more to it than a fellow thinks," said Willford, 64, a retired construction worker. "You're on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week. In a little town, you have the same formalities and problems as a big town. The bad thing is you don't have anyone to help you in a small town."

Other officials felt the same, leading to a virtually empty ballot in last Tuesday's election. The 154 residents who voted, worried about a leadership vacuum, made good a threat to write-in the names of friends and neighbors.

The incumbents ended up being returned to office and agreed to serve.

"I'll do the best I can for as long as I can," said Willford, who is suffering from a heart ailment.

City Recorder Evelyn Barnes had sought to retire to devote more time to her insurance business. No luck. She led the field of five names written in to fill the post.

Ed Tatum, a retired businessman, and Walter Luffman, a merchant, said they will serve on the four-member Board of Aldermen, although neither had sought the job. They led a field of 31 names written in for the positions.

"I had a lot of pressure to run for mayor, but I wouldn't do it," said Luffman, who served for 12 years before Willford. "It takes too much time from my business, but I will serve as alderman."

The only names on the ballot were those of incumbent Aldermen Fred Barr and Jerry Graves and Town Marshal D. M. Sipes. All won easily without opposition.

"The little town is in good shape financially," Willford said. "It may be in better shape than it's ever been in — better by far than New York."

©The New York Times

Ultra-high-voltage power lines that have been proliferating over the eastern United States are looming as a new environmental battleground — a source of electrical emissions suspected by some experts of being potentially harmful to humans and animals.

The Environmental Protection Agency's radiation division has opened a formal investigation to determine whether there are grounds for limiting the use of such lines or for imposing special precautions on public exposure.

Controversy over the suspected hazard has delayed the licensing of two proposed power lines in northern New York state, and protracted litigation has been blocking another project in Michigan.

There is no record of any person in the United States having been harmed by the heavy leakage of electricity from the ultra-powerful lines, carrying 765,000 volts, which constitute only 1,300 miles of the 100,000 miles of familiar "bulk" high-tension transmission lines that lace the country.

KU's Upset Of Sooners Still Vibrating

From News Wires
Norman, Okla. — The Kansas Jayhawks could have flown home to Lawrence, Kan., on their own power Saturday afternoon after halting Oklahoma's unbeaten string of 37 games, the fourth longest in the past half century of major college football.

The unranked Jayhawks not only pulled off the biggest upset of the 1975 season, but they did it by a mind-boggling score of 23-3.

It was the first time the Sooners had been held to less than a touchdown in 99 straight games, going back to a shutout by Notre Dame in 1966.

First-year Kansas Coach Bud Moore called it one of the greatest victories in college football history.

Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, unbeaten in his three years as Sooner head man, looked back on the defeat several hours after the game and said: "I've experienced both winning and losing and I'll tell you, I like the other winning a hell of a lot better."

Before anyone could utter a word about his first loss as a head coach, Switzer said, "at least one good thing happened to me today."

"When I got home after the game my six-year-old daughter took me aside and bent me down and whispered in my ear, 'I don't care if you did get beat, I still love you, Daddy.'"

"I'd like to think nobody put her up to that," Switzer said.

Switzer had actually written the script for Oklahoma's first loss earlier in the season when asked what it would take to defeat the Sooners, who had won 28 straight games since a 7-7 tie with Southern California in 1973.

"We'll get beaten if we make too many mistakes against a good football team," he said then.

That's exactly what happened Saturday before a paralyzed partisan Sooner crowd of 70,286.

before intermission, the Sooners suffered nine straight turnovers, including four lost fumbles and four interceptions.

The Sooners had manhandled Kansas in the early going, but only had a 3-0 lead on Tony DiFenzio's 52-yard field goal.

Eddie Lewis' block of a Tinker Owens punt gave Kansas the ball on the Sooner seven with 1:25 left before the half.

A brilliant six-yard run by quarterback Nolan Cromwell put the Jayhawks ahead, 7-3 at intermission.

From then on it was all Kansas as the Sooners fumbled on three straight possessions in the third period and Kansas converted two of the turnovers into a 17-3 lead on Laverne Smith's 21-yard run and a 32-yard field goal by Bob Swift.

Smith later scored on an 18-yard run to wrap up the stunning victory.

No one expected Kansas, now 6-3, would be the team to derail the proud Sooners.

The Jayhawks came into the game severely crippled on defense, but a fanatical effort helped produce those Sooner errors and put the Jayhawks suddenly in the post-season bowl picture.

"They just made too many mistakes to win," Kansas linebacker Rick Kovatch said.

"We knew if we stuck them, they'd fumble, and they did."

"We just went in looking for the ball on the ground."

Oklahoma must now regroup for two tough final games.

The Sooners go to Missouri Saturday and then play Nebraska on Nov. 22 in a game that will probably decide the Big Eight championship.

"Youth is a great thing — they'll bounce back," Switzer said of the fallen Sooners.

The defeat was the first on the collegiate level for many of the Sooners, including quarterback Steve Davis.

"We'll just have to start again. You can't win everything all of your life," said Davis, a licensed Baptist minister.

Oklahoma's unbeaten string of 37 games had been exceeded by only three major college teams in the past fifty years.

California had 46 victories and four ties under Andy Smith in 1920-25 and Bud Wilkinson's 1953-57 Oklahoma teams won 48 straight.

The loss prevented the Sooners from surpassing the 37-0-2 streak of Notre Dame under Frank Leahy in 1946-50.

Switzer appeared at post-game news conference after the game, and typical of the afternoon, fumbled a package of cigarettes upon entering the conference room.

But he didn't fumble the interviews.

The youthful coach had nothing but praise for Kansas and even managed a few jokes.

"They (the Jayhawks) are a good football team," he said.

"Not necessarily the best football team wins every time. Bud Moore knows that."

"But Kansas played a great game. I think that if it had been an error-free football game it still would have been very close."

"Kansas might have won any way. But I'd like to have found out."

"I got beat and I didn't even take a pro job," Switzer joked, with reference to Southern California's John McKay.

He knew it would hurt more later, Switzer said, but for the moment the interchange would be lively, cheerful and candid.

"Tomorrow when I'm by myself and it's quiet, that's when it kind of hits you a little more," he said.

The most disturbing thing about the 23-3 loss to Kansas, he said, was the Sooners failure to score early in the game.

"The most disappointing thing occurred in the first few minutes of the ball game when we could easily have had a 14 or 17-point lead," he said.

He said he couldn't explain all the lost fumbles.

"Those things happen sometimes, that's football," he said.

Some of them were weird, he said, such as the time Elvis Peacock reached the one-yard line and the ball was fumbled backward to the seven.

"We've won a lot of ball games the same way," he said.

Switzer was asked what he told the players after the game.

"We just got together and talked about what we've accomplished," he said.

"I told them they have nothing to be ashamed of. . . . They can look everybody in the eye and hold their heads up."

"We've got to prepare for the two games we've got coming up. We can still win the Big Eight and go to the Orange Bowl. We've got to meet adversity."

ISU Score Deceiving

Nebraska, with a chance to clinch a tie for the Big Eight Conference championship against Iowa State Saturday, should not be lulled by the 44-14 victory margin of Missouri over the Cyclones.

Missouri turned a 17-7 game at the end of the third quarter into a rout. It all started when Iowa State defensive end Joe Palmisano left the field on the Missouri side, which is a violation.

The Tigers were going to punt, but the automatic five-yard penalty let them keep possession. Eight plays later Missouri scored and it was 24-7 with 7:49 left.

Missouri's kickoff — a short squib-type boot designed to keep the ball away from ISU's freshman returner Ray Hardee — was covered by the Tigers at the ISU 26. Missouri scored again on a 22-yard pass from Steve Pisarkiewicz to Henry Marshall and then quickly got still another TD on a 65-yard runback of an intercepted pass. Jorrell Williams' 57-yard run made it 44-14 in the final half minute.

"Iowa State is always tough to play anywhere," Missouri coach Al Onofrio said Sunday. "We played a very stubborn Iowa State team and gave a tremendous effort. We played good defense and had some very fine offensive play."

"Iowa State has great specialty people, great speed in the secondary and they have some fine running backs. Buddy Hardeman is one of the quickest quarterbacks in the Big Eight," Onofrio said.

Cyclones Enthusiastic

Onofrio said Iowa State "plays football with a great deal of enthusiasm and has the people needed to give Nebraska a good go."

He also admitted that Kansas has made Missouri's job against Oklahoma much more difficult. "The Jayhawks may have awakened a sleeping giant," Onofrio fears.

"Oklahoma's roster reads like the NFL draft list," he added, spitting out names like Joe Washington, Tinker Owens, Steve Davis, Leroy and Dewey Selmon and Jimbo Elrod.

The Tiger coach also took note of the booing of Sooner fans Saturday during the Kansas game. "They were booing even when they were undefeated," he said. Some Oklahoma fans, he noted, were wearing "University of Switzer" tee shirts.

With Oklahoma's loss, the nation's longest winning streak is held jointly by Nebraska and Arizona State, each with 10 in a row. Both have 9-0 marks this season and both won their final games of last year.

Huskers Win 500th

Overlooked in the post-game commentary was the fact Nebraska's 12-0 victory over Kansas State Saturday was the 500th in the school's history.

Iowa State fullback-turned-running back, Jim Wingender, has rushed for 845 yards and needs to average just over 70 yards during the remaining two games to become the third Cyclone to crack the 1,000-yard barrier in one season. The others are George Amundson and Mike Strachan.

As a team, the Cyclones have rushed for 2,116 yards. The all-time one-season mark is 2,550 set by the 1972 team.

Wire services reported that Missouri used the on-side kick against Iowa State, but Onofrio said he wanted to keep the ball away from Hardee, who had a 100-yard kick return against Colorado.

"Hardee is a very fast wingback," Onofrio said of the freshman. "He has great balance and speed. You can't kick to him. He's going to be a great one."

Hardee fumbled the first kick to him Saturday and got the ball out only to the seven, but he almost broke the second one. After that, he didn't get the ball on MU kicks.

Catching Up On Football

Charlie Smith of United Press International reports Oklahoma had not lost a football game since a month before Richard Nixon was elected for a second term and that the Sooners had not lost to Kansas since the autumn of Lyndon Johnson's landslide victory over Barry Goldwater.

Smith also speculates that if Nebraska and Oklahoma tie for the Big Eight title the Orange Bowl is likely to pick the Sooners. "Since Oklahoma has been banned from a television appearance for the last two years because of its probationary status, the Orange Bowl likely would want the Sooners to make their return to national television in Miami," he wrote.

Barry Switzer said losing isn't much fun, but Southern California coach John McKay, whose Trojans have lost two in a row, had this comment: "The way we're playing, we shouldn't go to the Toilet Bowl."

Ohio State and Michigan appear to be the only Big Ten teams likely to get a major bowl bid. Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa are tied for third with 3-3 league records. Wisconsin and Illinois are both 4-5 overall while Iowa is 3-6.

Nebraska undoubtedly will move ahead of Oklahoma into the No. 2 spot in this week's wire service polls. The meager 12-0 score over Kansas State, however, will keep Ohio State as No. 1. No. 2 is the highest NU has been rated since the national championship season.

Nebraska has finished in the top ten of Associated Press 11 times while UPI has had the Huskers there eight times. It looks like it will take an 11-0 record, plus a Michigan victory over Ohio State to win the national title.

Lincolnite Wins Place In Meet

Omaha — Lincolnite Roger Capan captured first place in the men's open division in the Judo Senior Invitational here Sunday at Shin's Judo Academy.

Other Lincolnites earning honors included Rodney Whitehall third in the men's 176 pound division and Ann Czajkowski and Marcy Wemhoff taking second and third respectively in the women's middleweight division.

AFC Central Opens Some

By United Press International
The American Football Conference's Central Division race opened up a little Sunday—but not much.

The three-way tie for first was broken when the World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers defeated Houston 24-17, dropping the Oilers a game behind. Cincinnati, however, remained tied with the Steelers at 7-1 by edging the Denver Broncos 17-16.

Terry Bradshaw threw three touchdown passes, including a 21-yarder to John Stallworth with just 38 seconds left, to lift the Steelers past stubborn Houston. Bradshaw also threw TD passes of eight yards to Lynn Swann and Larry Brown. Fred Willis' one-yard plunge after a pass interference penalty tied the score for the Oilers with 2:38 left.

Cincinnati, which trailed 13-7 at the half, came back to take the lead on Boobie Clark's one-yard run in the third quarter and then held off Denver. Ed Williams scored earlier for Cincinnati on a one-yard plunge while the Bronco TDs came on Floyd Little's one-yard plunge and Steve Ramsey's 10-yard pass to Riley Odoms.

There were two major upsets Sunday. Hungarian-born rookie Steve Mike-Mayer boomed a 54-yard field goal with 38 seconds left to lead the San Francisco 49ers to a 24-23 win over the Los Angeles Rams and Bert Jones' two-TD passes, one an 89-yarder to Roger Carr, lifted the Baltimore Colts to a 42-35 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

Steve Spurrier, who just regained his quarterback job, had three TD passes for the 49ers and O.J. Simpson scored three times for the Bills in a losing cause. Simpson rushed for 123 yards while Baltimore's Lydell Mitchell also scored three TDs and ran for 112 yards.

Elsewhere, Larry Brown's one-yard run early in the fourth quarter put the Washington Redskins ahead and they held on for a 21-13 victory over the New York Giants. The Redskins, who now share the NFC East lead with St. Louis at 6-2, also got a 96-yard TD pass from Billy Kilmer to Frank Grant before Kilmer's shoulder was injured. Ex-Giant Randy Johnson finished up.

St. Louis kept pace as Jim Bakken connected on a 30-yard field goal with three seconds left to carry the Cards to a 24-23 win over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Bob Griese hit Norm Bulaich with TD passes of 59 and seven yards and rookie Fred Solomon returned a punt 50 yards for a score as the Miami Dolphins whipped the New York Jets 27-7 for their seventh straight victory.

Joe Namath had a 15-yard TD pass for the Jets, who lost their fifth straight.

The Minnesota Vikings remained the only unbeaten team in the league with a 38-0 rout of the Atlanta Falcons. The Viking defense forced seven turnovers, including Jim Marshall's league record 28th fumble recovery, and Chuck Foreman had three TDs to run his league leading total to 11.

Ken Stabler threw TD passes of 36 and 48 yards to Morris Bradshaw and passed for 232 yards as Oakland swamped the New Orleans Saints 48-10.

Joe Reed threw a 62-yard pass on the first play of the game and then hit Ray Jarvis with a 21-yard TD pass to ignite the Detroit Lions to a 21-10 victory over the winless Cleveland Browns.

Craig Clemons returned an interception 76 yards for a score to spark the Chicago Bears to a 27-14 victory over the Green Bay Packers, snapping a five-game losing streak, and cornerback Bob Howard's 44-yard interception return for a TD helped the New England Patriots send the winless San Diego Chargers to their eighth loss, 33-19.

Most Playoff Times Set

Friday.

Pius X coach and athletic director Vince Aldrich favors a night matchup with Waverly, but Vikings coach Randy Hash has indicated preference for a day game.

"The availability of workers for Seacrest may have some influence on possibly moving the game to the night," Hash said. "But we're definitely leaning to an afternoon game."

"We just can't see playing at night with the way the weather can be this time of year," he added. "I know it will work on some people, but I think a day game is best for the sake of the kids."

The four lower class state championship matchups also appear headed for 1:30 matinee performances Friday.

Wahoo Neumann (9-1) will host Plainview (10-0) at Fremont's Memorial Stadium in the Class C-1 title game.

Grant (9-1) hosts Scribner (8-1) in Class C-2, Nelson (9-0-1) hosts Lawrence (9-1) at Superior in Class D and Elgin (10-0) hosts Adams (10-0) in eight-man.

Only the Scribner-Grant game seems a possible change. "We'll talk with Scribner Monday morning and if they want to go at 7:30, we may show them some good old Western hospitality," Grant coach Al Gaston said.

Links, Rockets Meet In First Round

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Last year's state volleyball championships in Scottsbluff produced a 1-2 Lincoln finish in the Class A division.

Pairings released Sunday by the Nebraska School Activities Assn., (NSAA), guarantee no 1-2 repeat by Lincoln schools despite the fact the Capital City will be represented by both Lincoln High and Northeast.

Second-seeded Lincoln High (17-3) and the seventh-seeded Rockets (9-7) qualifiers in their respective districts, are scheduled to meet in the first round Friday at 12:45 p.m. MST.

Although Lincoln High has held the upper hand in the majority of the meetings between the two schools this year, Northeast handed the Links one of three early season losses and gave Joyce Johnson's squad a scare during the Eastern I-80 Conference meet two weeks ago.

"That game we showed we weren't working well as a team," Johnson said. "The girls showed a lot of guts to come back like they did, being down that far."

Northeast had the Links down 14-6 in the last game before losing 16-14, after winning the first 15-1 and dropping the second 10-15.

"We were trying some new things that game and we learned quite a bit," Johnson added. "One thing we learned was to go back to our old strategies."

Both coaches might have to come up with some new strategies for the bus ride out to Scottsbluff together.

"I didn't really care if we were going to be in the same bracket, but I didn't want to play Lincoln High first," Northeast coach Jody Bell said. "I think it will be a long trip out there."

"I hate to see tension between two teams that have played each other so many times this year. And you'll have a little tension riding with the team you're going to play in the first game," she added.

"We're not afraid of playing Lincoln High because the girls know they can play with them," Bell noted. "But it's just too bad we have to meet first. I'd be willing to change with Millard (which plays No. 1 seeded Omaha South)."

Bell credits the Rocket's late season success to maturity.

"I think our team has definitely matured a great deal in the last few weeks," she said. "Any team that beats Lincoln High will have to play consistent all the way through. They'll have to show their maturity and keep cool."

"I think Lincoln has two good schools represented this year just like last year," Bell said. "Except there's no way we can meet in the finals."

Thirty-two teams have ideas of reaching the finals in four classes as Waverly (Class B) and Madison (Class C) are the only returning state champions.

Class D Potter is the other unbeaten with a 16-0 mark.

Entering the tournament with the worst win-loss mark is Class A Millard with just four wins in 14 matches and two of those coming in district competition.

Nebraska Western College in Scottsbluff is the host for the annual tournament and all first round matches will be scheduled for Friday with semifinals and finals staggered in each class Saturday.

Here is the schedule of pairings, paragraphed by brackets, for Friday's first round matches. Teams were seeded No. 1 through No. 8 according to records in each class. Seed number precedes each team in parenthesis.

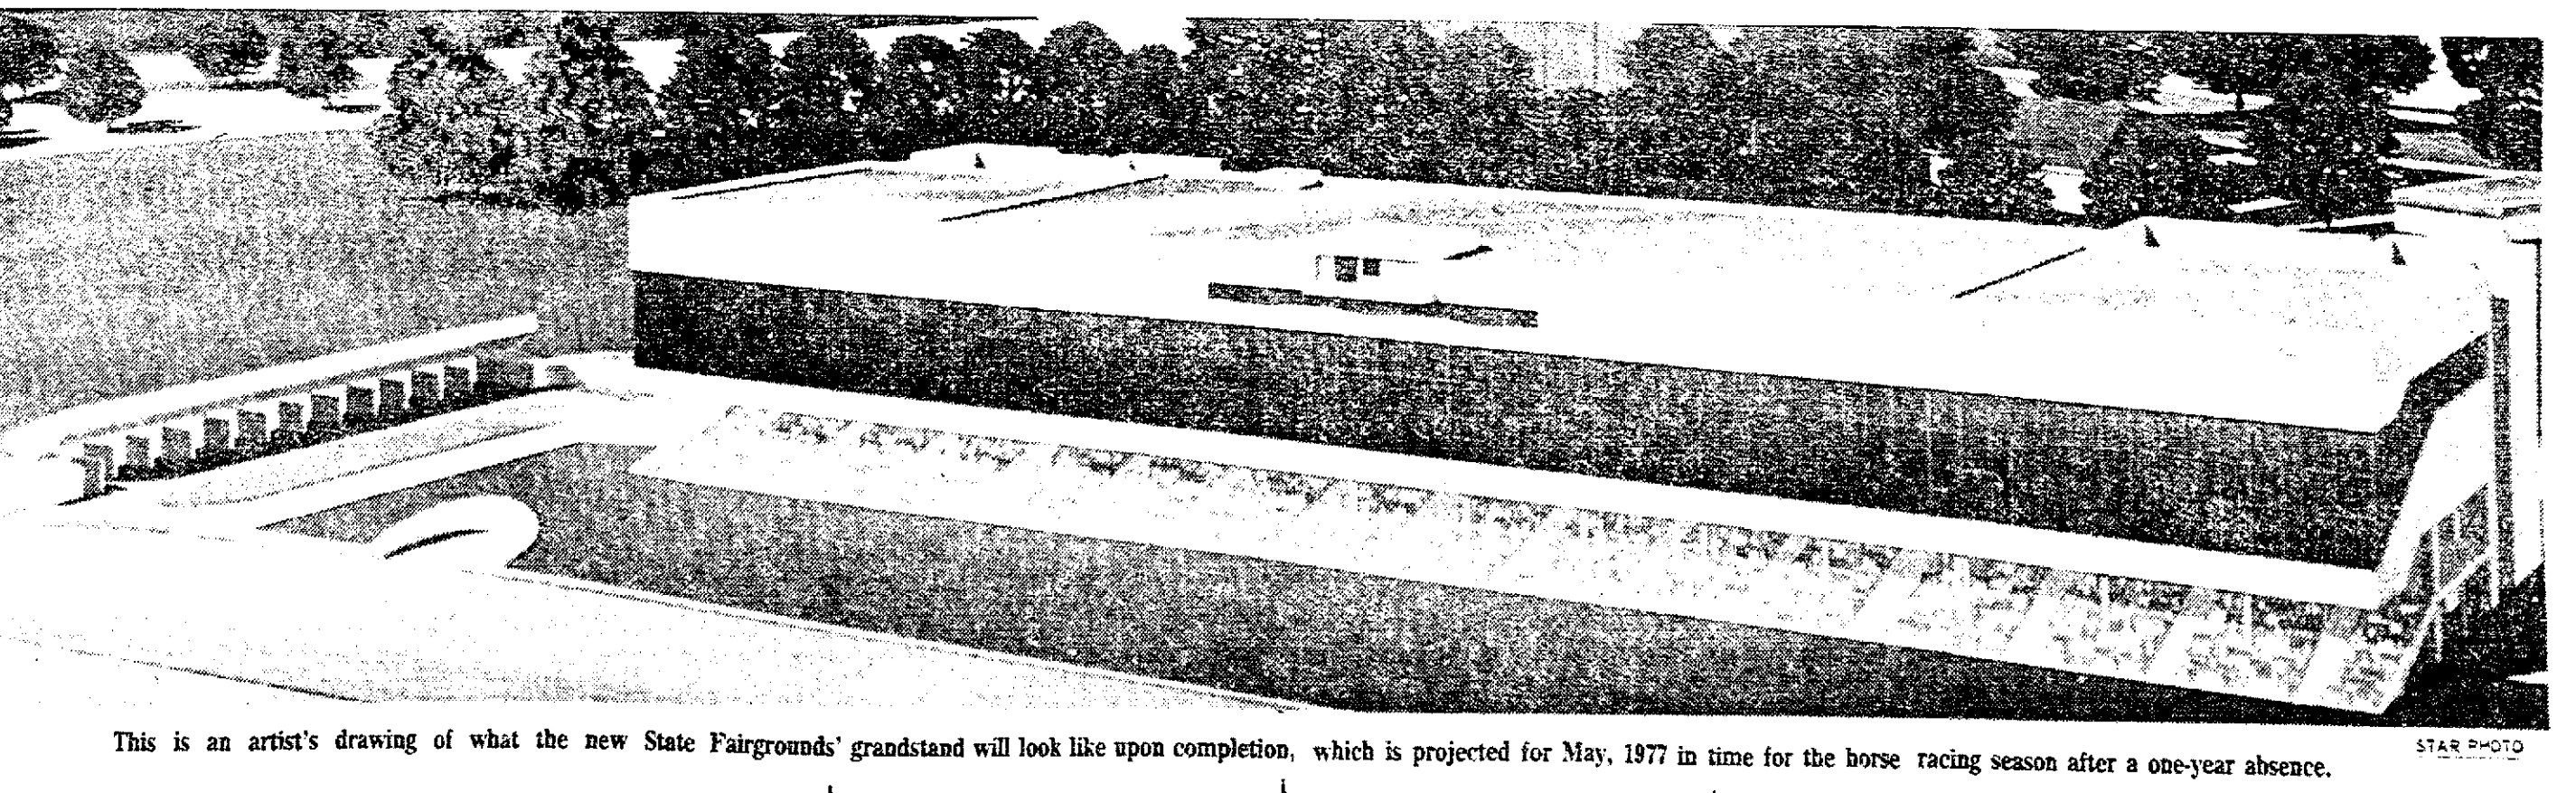

Class A
11 a.m. — (6) Beatrice (9-6) vs. (3) Fremont (12-3); 12:15 p.m. — (2) Lincoln High (17-3) vs. (7) Lincoln Northeast (9-7); 1:30 p.m. — (1) Omaha South (16-1) vs. (8) Millard (4-10); 2:45 p.m. — (5) Omaha Westside (11-6) vs. (4) North Platte (15-5).
Semifinals — 11 a.m. Saturday.
Finals — 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

Class B
5:30 p.m. — (1) Waverly (16-1) vs. (8) Grand Island Northwest (13-8); 6:45 p.m. — (5) Lexington (13-4) vs. (4) Omaha Roncalli (12-3).
8 p.m. — (6) Ord (10-6) vs. (3) Ogallala (11-2); 9:15 p.m. — (7) Syracuse (15-9) vs. (2) Wayne (16-2).
Semifinals — 1:30 p.m. Saturday.
Finals — 8 p.m. Saturday.

Semifinals — 2:45 p.m. Saturday.
Finals — 9:15 p.m. Saturday.

Class D
11 a.m. — (6) Wheatland (15-4) vs. (3) Cedar Rapids (18-1); 12:15 a.m. — (2) Elmwood (22-1) vs. (7) Waucoma (15-4).
1:30 p.m. — (5) Pleasanton (19-5) vs. (4) Burning (18-1); 2:45 p.m. — (1) Potter (17-0) vs. (8) Bladen (15-7).
Semifinals — 12:15 p.m. Saturday.
All matches to be played at the Nebraska Western College gymnasium in Scottsbluff. Times shown are Mountain Standard Time (MST).

Returning Teams
Class A — Omaha Westside, Fremont, Lincoln High.
Class B — Ogallala, Waverly.
Class C — North Platte St. Pat's, Madison, Sandy Creek, Ansley.
Class D — Potter, Burning.
Note: Ogallala was Class A last year. Defending champions are in bold face type.

Onofrio said Iowa State "plays football with a great deal of enthusiasm and has the people needed to give Nebraska a good go."

He also admitted that Kansas has made Missouri's job against Oklahoma much more difficult. "The Jayhawks may have awakened a sleeping giant," Onofrio fears.

"Oklahoma's roster reads like the NFL draft list," he added, spitting out names like Joe Washington, Tinker Owens, Steve Davis, Leroy and Dewey Selmon and Jimbo Elrod.

The Tiger coach also took note of the booing of Sooner fans Saturday during the Kansas game. "They were booing even when they were undefeated," he said. Some Oklahoma fans, he noted, were wearing "University of Switzer" tee shirts.

With Oklahoma's loss, the nation's longest winning streak is held jointly by Nebraska and Arizona State, each with 10 in a row. Both have 9-0 marks this season and both won their final games of last year.

Huskers Win 500th

Overlooked in the post-game commentary was the fact Nebraska's 12-0 victory over Kansas State Saturday was the 500th in the school's history.

Iowa State fullback-turned-running back, Jim Wengender, has rushed for 845 yards and needs to average just over 70 yards during the remaining two games to become the third Cyclone to crack the 1,000-yard barrier in one season. The others are George Amundson and Mike Strachan.

As a team, the Cyclones have rushed for 2,116 yards. The all-time one-season mark is 2,350 set by the 1972 team.

Wire services reported that Missouri used the on-side kick against Iowa State, but Onofrio said he wanted to keep the ball away from Hardee, who had a 100-yard kick return against Colorado.

"Hardee is a very fast wingback," Onofrio said of the freshman. "He has great balance and speed. You can't kick to him. He's going to be a great one."

Hardee fumbled the first kick to him Saturday and got the ball out only to the seven, but he almost broke the second one. After that, he didn't get the ball on MU kicks.

Catching Up On Football

Charlie Smith of United Press International reports Oklahoma had not lost a football game since a month before Richard Nixon was elected for a second term and that the Sooners had not lost to Kansas since the autumn of Lyndon Johnson's landslide victory over Barry Goldwater.

Smith also speculates that if Nebraska and Oklahoma tie for the Big Eight title the Orange Bowl is likely to pick the Sooners. "Since Oklahoma has been banned from a television appearance for the last two years because of its probationary status, the Orange Bowl likely would want the Sooners to make their return to national television in Miami," he wrote.

Barry Switzer said losing isn't much fun, but Southern California coach John McKay, whose Trojans have lost two in a row, had this comment: "The way we're playing, we shouldn't go to the Toilet Bowl."

Ohio State and Michigan appear to be the only Big Ten teams likely to get a major bowl bid. Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa are tied for third with 3-3 league records. Wisconsin and Illinois are both 4-5 overall while Iowa is 3-6.

Nebraska undoubtedly will move ahead of Oklahoma into the No. 2 spot in this week's wire service polls. The meager 12-0 score over Kansas State, however, will keep Ohio State as No. 1. No. 2 is the highest NU has been rated since the national championship season.

Nebraska has finished in the top ten of Associated Press 11 times while UPI has had the Huskers there eight times. It looks like it will take an 11-0 record, plus a Michigan victory over Ohio State to win the national title.

Lincolnite Wins Place In Meet

Omaha — Lincolnite Roger Capan captured first place in the men's open division in the Judo Senior Invitational here Sunday at Shin's Judo Academy.

Other Lincolnites earning honors included Rodney Whitehall third in the men's 176 pound division and Ann Czajkowski and Marcy Wemhoff taking second and third respectively in the women's middleweight division.

AFC Central Opens Some

By United Press International
The American Football Conference's Central Division race opened up a little Sunday—but not much.

The three-way tie for first was broken when the World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers defeated Houston 24-17, dropping the Oilers a game behind. Cincinnati, however, remained tied with the Steelers at 7-1 by edging the Denver Broncos 17-16.

Terry Bradshaw threw three touchdown passes, including a 21-yarder to John Stallworth with just 38 seconds left, to lift the Steelers past stubborn Houston. Bradshaw also threw TD passes of eight yards to Lynn Swann and Larry Brown. Fred Willis' one-yard plunge after a pass interference penalty tied the score for the Oilers with 2:38 left.

Cincinnati, which trailed 13-7 at the half, came back to take the lead on Boobie Clark's one-yard run in the third quarter and then held off Denver. Ed Williams scored earlier for Cincinnati on a one-yard plunge while the Bronco TDs came on Floyd Little's one-yard plunge and Steve Ramsey's 10-yard pass to Riley Odoms.

There were two major upsets Sunday. Hungarian-born rookie Steve Mike-Mayer boomed a 54-yard field goal with 38 seconds left to lead the San Francisco 49ers to a 24-23 win over the Los Angeles Rams and Bert Jones' two-TD passes, one an 89-yarder to Roger Carr, lifted the Baltimore Colts to a 42-35 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

Steve Spurrier, who just regained his quarterback job, had three TD passes for the 49ers and O.J. Simpson scored three times for the Bills in a losing cause. Simpson rushed for 123 yards while Baltimore's Lydeil Mitchell also scored three TDs and ran for 112 yards.

Elsewhere, Larry Brown's one-yard run early in the fourth quarter put the Washington Redskins ahead and they held on for a 21-13 victory over the New York Giants. The Redskins, who now share the NFC East lead with St. Louis at 6-2, also got a 96-yard TD pass from Billy Kilmer to Frank Grant before Kilmer's shoulder was injured. Ex-Giant Randy Johnson finished up.

St. Louis kept pace as Jim Bakken connected on a 30-yard field goal with three seconds left to carry the Cards to a 24-23 win over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Bob Griese hit Norm Bulaich with TD passes of 59 and seven yards and rookie Fred Solomon returned a punt 50 yards for a score as the Miami Dolphins whipped the New York Jets 27-7 for their seventh straight victory.

Joe Namath had a 15-yard TD pass for the Jets, who lost their fifth straight.

The Minnesota Vikings remained the only unbeaten team in the league with a 38-0 record of the Atlanta Falcons. The Viking defense forced seven turnovers, including Jim Marshall's league record 26th fumble recovery, and Chuck Foreman had three TDs to run his league leading total to 11.

Ken Stabler threw TD passes

of 36 and 48 yards to Morris Bradshaw and passed for 232 yards as Oakland swamped the New Orleans Saints 48-10.

Joe Reed threw a 62-yard pass on the first play of the game and then hit Ray Jarvis with a 21-yard TD pass to ignite the Detroit Lions to a 21-10 victory over the winless Cleveland Browns.

Craig Clemons returned an interception 76 yards for a score to spark the Chicago Bears to a 27-14 victory over the Green Bay Packers, snapping a five-game losing streak, and cornerback Bob Howard's 44-yard interception return for a TD helped the New England Patriots send the winless San Diego Chargers to their eighth loss, 33-19.

Most Playoff Times Set

It looks as if Lincoln football fans can watch two state championship playoff games Friday.

Although no official decision had been reached by Sunday night, Lincoln Plus X (9-0) and Waverly (10-0) appeared headed for a 1:30 p.m. contest Friday at Seacrest Field.

That would mean fans could watch the Class B title game in the afternoon, then head to Omaha for the Class A championship between Lincoln East (9-0-2) and Omaha Westside (9-1) at UNO at 7:30 p.m.

"Even though it was 73 degrees Friday, the weather is still too unpredictable at this time of the year," East coach Lee Zentic said.

"Fields at Omaha Burke and Omaha Westside are pretty bare this time of year and don't hold moisture very well," he noted.

"So instead of risking playing in a mud bath, we thought it would be best to play AstroTurf because it guarantees your footing," Zentic said.

Actually, East preferred an afternoon game, but UNO's facility isn't available during the day because of parking problems.

Plus X officials will meet with Lincoln public school officials Monday to secure Seacrest for Friday.

Plus X coach and athletic director Vince Aldrich favors a night matchup with Waverly, but Vikings coach Randy Hash has indicated preference for a day game.

"The availability of workers for Seacrest may have some influence on possibly moving the game to the night," Hash said. "But we're definitely leaning to an afternoon game."

"We just can't see playing at night with the way the weather can be this time of year," he added. "I know it will work on some people, but I think a day game is best for the sake of the kids."

The four lower class state championship matchups also appear headed for 1:30 matinee performances Friday.

Wahoo Neumann (9-1) will host Plainview (10-0) at Fremont's Memorial Stadium in the Class C-1 title game.

Grant (9-1) hosts Scribner (9-1) in Class C-2, Nelson (9-0-1) hosts Lawrence (9-1) at Superior in Class D and Elgin (10-0) hosts Adams (10-0) in eight-man.

Only the Scribner-Grant game seems a possible change. "We'll talk with Scribner Monday morning and if they want to go at 7:30, we may show them some good old Western hospitality," Grant coach Al Gaston said.

Links, Rockets Meet In First Round

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Last year's state volleyball championships in Scottsbluff produced a 1-2 Lincoln finish in the Class A division.

Pairings released Sunday by the Nebraska School Activities Assn., (NSAA), guarantee no 1-2 repeat by Lincoln schools despite the fact the Capital City will be represented by both Lincoln High and Northeast.

Second-seeded Lincoln High (17-3) and the seventh-seeded Rockets (9-7) qualifiers in their respective districts, are scheduled to meet in the first round Friday at 12:45 p.m. MST.

Although Lincoln High has held the upper hand in the majority of the meetings between the two schools this year, Northeast handed the Links one of three early season losses and gave Joyce Johnson's squad a scare during the Eastern I-80 Conference meet two weeks ago.

"That game we showed we weren't working well as a team," Johnson said. "The girls showed a lot of guts to come back like they did, being down that far."

Northeast had the Links down 14-6 in the last game before losing 16-14, after winning the first 15-1 and dropping the second 10-15.

"We were trying some new things that game and we learned quite a bit," Johnson added. "One thing we learned was to go back to our old strategies."

Both coaches might have to come up with some new strategies for the bus ride out to Scottsbluff together.

"I didn't really care if we were going to be in the same bracket, but I didn't want to play Lincoln High first," Northeast coach Jody Bell said. "I think it will be a long trip out there."

"I hate to see tension between two teams that have played each other so many times this year. And you'll have a little tension riding with the team you're going to play in the first game," she added.

"We're not afraid of playing Lincoln High because the girls know they can play with them," Bell noted. "But it's just too bad we have to meet first. I'd be willing to change with Millard (which plays No. 1 seeded Omaha South)."

Bell credits the Rocket's late season success to maturity. "I think our team has definitely matured a great deal in the last few weeks," she said. "Any team that beats Lincoln High will have to play consistent all the way through. They'll have to show their maturity and keep cool."

"I think Lincoln has two good schools represented this year just like last year," Bell said. "Except there's no way we can meet in the finals."

Thirty-two teams have ideas of reaching the finals in four classes as Waverly (Class B) and Madison (Class C) are the only returning state champions.

Earning every state title in Class B since the tournament's inception, Waverly enters as the No. 1 seed with a 16-1 season record.

The ViQueens, whose state record winning streak was snapped this season by Centennial, will meet eighth seeded Grand Island Northwest in the first round.

Defending Class C champion Madison is the eighth-seeded team in its division and will face top-seeded Dodge (19-0) one of two unbeaten teams left in the state.

Class D Potter is the other unbeaten with a 16-0 mark. Entering the tournament with the worst win-loss mark is Class A Millard with just four wins in 14 matches and two of those coming in district competition.

Nebraska Western College in Scottsbluff is the host for the annual tournament and all first round matches will be scheduled for Friday with semifinals and finals staggered in each class Saturday.

Here is the schedule of pairings, paragraphed by brackets, for Friday's first round matches. Teams were seeded No. 1 through No. 8 according to records in each class. Seed number precedes each team in parenthesis.

Foe's Quick Score Benefits NWU

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Nebraska Wesleyan football coach Harold Chaffee said he was happy it was Benedictine that scored on its opening play of the game rather than the Plainsmen.

"We kicked off to Benedictine and on their first play they threw a 72 yard touchdown pass that caught us sleeping," Chaffee said. "But that kind of thing can be good for a team, in that it sometimes shocks you back in to the game. I'm glad it wasn't that that scored on the first play."

It did work to Wesleyan's benefit as the Plainsmen rolled to a 22-14 win over the Ravens, to close out the season with a 5-5 overall record.

Harold Chaffee
NWU Coach

offense did the scoring," Chaffee said.

NWU Takes Lead

Wesleyan went ahead when quarterback Dan Klaus hit Gerald Seitz on a 25-yard aerial and then connected to senior end Bob Blake for a two-point PAT. Stallworth finally iced the game when he spurted 74 yards off tackle to give Wesleyan a 22-14 lead.

"It was a simple off tackle power play that Byron broke for a touchdown after he got one-on-one with their safety," Chaffee said. "We figure anytime we can get Stallworth one-on-one with anybody, we're going to get some big yardage."

Junior defensive lineman

Senior defensive back Mike Reta, who was the team manager last year, picked off his seventh pass of the season.

"It's always great to close with a win," said Chaffee, who'll lose eight seniors from this year's squad. "And we haven't broken even (.500) on the record in three years so that's another good thing about this year."

"We only had two games this year where we didn't lead at one point or another. So without a doubt we had a good club and were not that far from being outstanding," Chaffee said. "I think the effort that everybody put out helped us overcome what we lacked in experience."

Midland Rolls On

Midland jumped to a 16-0 lead over Westmar, Ia. and then had to struggle to hold on to win 25-20 and maintain hopes of gaining an NAIA playoff berth.

The Warriors, 9-1 and ranked sixth in the NAIA Division II, will close out the regular season next Saturday against third ranked Texas Lutheran, 9-1, in Seguin, Tex.

Midland ran 66 rushing plays for 259 yards and threw 17 times,

completing nine for 139 yards while Westmar ran 57 plays for 172.

Seasons End

Concordia and Wayne closed their seasons with wins, while Peru State suffered a loss to Doane.

Concordia steamrolled past its sister college of the same name from St. Paul, Minn., behind the running efforts of fullback Don Baker, who gained 207 yards and two touchdowns. Runningback Tim Warneke also scored twice for the Bulldogs, which closed 3-6-1 with the 36-8 win.

Wayne had a bit tougher time with Black Hills State, winning on a 53 yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Dave Miller to Maurie Mintken, leading receiver among the state college players.

The Wildcat defense added the final note, however, as they held Black Hills for a safety in the closing seconds of the game. Wayne finished the season 5-5.

The Wildcats, which handed Midland its only loss of the season, had a tough season, dropping a six-point decision to Kearney and losing to Chadron on a last minute field goal. The Wayne defense closed the season ranked 14th in total defense in the NAIA and seventh in rushing defense in the NAIA.

Peru State closed its season with a 4-6 mark when the renewed Doane Tigers picked apart the Bobcat offense for seven turnovers, and Tiger runningback Steve Schulz scored twice.

Doane will close with Missouri Southern next week.

Kearney State Wins Tourney

Wayne (UPI) — Kearney State defeated Concordia in two sets Sunday to win its second straight Nebraska Women's College volleyball tournament held at Wayne State College.

Kearney State won the title in sets of 15-3, 15-6, finishing the three-day tournament undefeated. Concordia qualified for the title match earlier in the day, with semifinal round victories over Midland and Chadron State.

Concordia defeated Midland, 15-6, 15-11, and defeated Chadron State, 15-13, 6-15, 15-10.

Kearney State qualified for the title match Saturday, defeating Hastings, 15-1, 15-3, and dumping Midland, 15-8, 15-4. In the loser's bracket Saturday, Concordia defeated Wesleyan, 15-7, 15-12, and Hastings, 15-6, 15-7. Chadron State defeated Doane, 8-15, 15-7, 15-8, and defeated Wayne State, 6-15, 15-3, 15-7.

Exec Club Gains Win In Classic

Denver, Colo. — The Lincoln Executive Club midget football team won the Husker-Buffalo Classic midget football contest here Saturday with a 42-12 romp over the Red Lions of Arvada.

Mike McCasland scored the first touchdown for the Execs on a 25-yard run. Mike Hatten added two tallies on runs of 30 and 35 yards. Hatten carried the ball 11 times for 120 yards rushing.

Quarterback Todd Zart connected on nine of 12 passes, one for a TD, for 162 yards. Tom Schroer scooped in the 41-yard scoring toss and another three for 93 yards.

John Irwin collected three passes for 54 yards and Shawn Kelley had two for 13 yards.

McCasland rushed eight times for 56 yards, and John Francke, who scored on a 29-yard run, rushed six times for 42 yards.

The Lincoln club piled up 239 yards rushing on 32 attempts. The Arvada team was held scoreless until the fourth quarter.

The Executive Club team held the Lincoln record intact, with four wins in the four-year-old classic.

TENNIS

Adriano Panatta of Italy upset American favorite Jimmy Connors in the final of the Stockholm Open tennis tournament, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Veterans Frew McMillan and Bob Hewitt of South Africa won the Stockholm doubles title. They beat Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., and Charles Pasarell of Puerto Rico 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 in the final.

Virginia Wade of Britain defeated her countrywoman Sue Barker 6-1, 6-7, 9-7 to win the Paris Women's tennis tournament. Francoise Durr of France and Betty Stove of the Netherlands won the women's doubles final, beating Wade and Australia's Evonne Goolagong.

Raul Ramirez of Mexico defeated U.S. Open champion Manuel Orantes of Spain to win the $16,000 first prize in the men's singles event of the Japan Open tennis championships. Ramirez teamed with Brian Gottfried of the United States to win the men's doubles title, beating Orantes and Juan Gisbert of Spain.

FOOTBALL

San Francisco 49er defensive back Ralph McGill was apparently seriously injured when struck by the kicking foot of the Los Angeles Rams' Tom Dempsey during a field goal play. McGill was reported to be undergoing treatment for a concussion and having X-rays for possible neck injuries.

Quarterback Billy Kilmer of the Washington Redskins suffered a dislocated right shoulder late in the game against the New York Giants. X-rays disclosed the dislocation and possible fracture of Kilmer's throwing arm.

Buffalo Bills quarterback Joe Ferguson was injured in the game against the Baltimore Colts. Ferguson was taken to a hospital and treated for a mild to moderate concussion.

Colorado State coach Sark Arslanian, whose team has clinched its first winning season since 1966, is under consideration for the head coaching position at Oregon State, Colorado State University officials said.

OTHER SPORTS

Buddy Baker took advantage of a rain-delayed second start to win the Dixie 500 stock car race in Hampton, Ga.

A. J. Fort, this year's U.S. Auto Club national champion, added another gem to his crown by winning the Phoenix 150 Indy-type auto race.

Masaji Kusakabe fired a two-under-par 70 and scored a two-stroke victory in a rain-shortened $100,000 charity golf tournament. American Danny Edwards tied for second with two Japanese. Johnny Miller shared fifth place with six other golfers, including Larry Hinson of United States. Billy Casper finished eight strokes off the pace.

Billy Dunk, the Australian golfer who scores well but has trouble winning tournaments, won the $62,500 Chrysler Classic golf tournament.

Foe's Quick Score Benefits NWU

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Nebraska Wesleyan football coach Harold Chaffee said he was happy it was Benedictine that scored on its opening play of the game rather than the Plainsmen.

"We kicked off to Benedictine and on their first play they threw a 72 yard touchdown pass that caught us sleeping," Chaffee said. "But that kind of thing can be good for a team, in that it sometimes shocks you back in to the game. I'm glad it wasn't us that scored on the first play."

It did work to Wesleyan's benefit as the Plainsmen rolled to a 22-14 win over the Ravens, to close out the season with a 5-5 overall record.

Harold Chaffee
NWU Coach

offense did the scoring," Chaffee said.

NWU Takes Lead

Wesleyan went ahead when quarterback Dan Klaus hit Gerald Seitz on a 25-yard aerial and then connected to senior end Bob Blake for a two-point PAT. Stallworth finally iced the game when he spurred 74 yards off tackle to give Wesleyan a 22-14 lead.

"It was a simple off tackle power play that Byron broke for a touchdown after he got one-on-one with their saftey," Chaffee said. "We figure anytime we can get Stallworth one-on-one with anybody, we're going to get some big yardage."

Junior defensive lineman

Doug Hahn closed out his collegiate career on a bright note, grabbing one interception and recovering a fumble, besides blocking three passes.

Senior defensive back Mike Reta, who was the team manager last year, picked off his seventh pass of the season.

"It's always great to close with a win," said Chaffee, who'll lose eight seniors from this year's squad. "And we haven't broken even (.500) on the record in three years so that's another good thing about this year."

"We only had two games this year we didn't lead at one point or another. So without a doubt we had a good club and were not that far from being outstanding," Chaffee said. "I think the effort that everybody put out helped us overcome what we lacked in experience."

Midland Rolls On

Midland jumped to a 16-0 lead over Westmar, Ia. and then had to struggle to hold on to win 26-20 and maintain hopes of gaining an NAIA playoff berth.

The Warriors, 9-1 and ranked sixth in the NAIA Division II, will close out the regular season next Saturday against third ranked Texas Lutheran, 9-1, in Seguin, Tex.

Midland ran 66 rushing plays for 259 yards and threw 17 times, completing nine for 139 yards while Westmar ran 57 plays for 172.

Seasons End

Concordia and Wayne closed their seasons with wins, while Peru State suffered a loss to Doane.

Concordia steamrolled past its sister college of the same name from St. Paul, Minn., behind the running efforts of fullback Don Baker, who gained 207 yards and two touchdowns. Runningback Tim Warneke also scored twice for the Bulldogs, which closed 3-6-1 with the 36-8 win.

Wayne had a half tougher time with Black Hills State, winning on a 53 yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Dave Miller to Maurie Mintken, leading receiver among the state college players.

The Wildcat defense added the final note, however, as they held Black Hills for a safety in the closing seconds of the game. Wayne finished the season 5-5.

The Wildcats, which handed Midland its only loss of the season, had a tough season, dropping a six-point decision to Kearney and losing to Chadron on a last minute field goal. The Wayne defense closed the season ranked 14th in total defense in the NAIA and seventh in rushing defense in the NAIA.

Exec Club Gains Win In Classic

Peru State closed its season with a 4-6 mark when the renewed Doane Tigers picked apart the Bobcat offense for seven turnovers, and Tiger runningback Steve Schulz scored twice.

Doane will close with Missouri Southern next week.

Student Proposes Ice Rink

Mark Champion got fed up with driving to Omaha's Ak-Sar-Ben Coliseum every time the University of Nebraska-Lincoln hockey club had practice.

So he decided to do something about it.

The 24-year-old UNL graduate took a stroll around the State Fairgrounds Coliseum, borrowed the blueprints from State Fair manager Henry Brandt, went to his drawing board and began trying to fit a hockey-size rink into the present arena.

It fit like a glove.

The executive board of the State Fair Board examined his plan Friday, and board members said they'd be happy to talk again if he could raise the estimated $270,000 for construction.

The plan calls for construction of a concrete base in the present arena. Freon-carrying pipes about an inch apart would freeze water for the ice rink.

Locker rooms would be built under the stage. A seating area would be converted for use as penalty and scorekeeper's boxes and player benches. Some seldom-used rooms would be used for a pro shop, shoe lockers, skate rental and skate sharpening.

Champion wants to see the rink used from Oct. 1 to March 31 for ice follies, figure skating lessons, youth hockey programs, possible professional exhibitions and, of course, the hockey club's practices and games.

"We're in our fourth year of operation and half the city doesn't even know we have a team," he said. "People here have one-track, tunnel vision: football. They don't think of anything else.

"If we had this rink, in three or four years we could have a nationally-ranked hockey team."

Pershing Auditorium's ice facilities aren't satisfactory, Champion said, because the auditorium is also used for other things, such as basketball games, during winter months.

Other proposals for an indoor hockey and ice skating rink in Lincoln have been discussed in past years. Champion said the advantage of his plan is that it

Nebraska basketball's annual Red-White Intrasquad game will be held in Grand Island Monday, Nov. 24, at the Grand Island High School gymnasium. Tipoff will be at 7:30 p.m.
---	--

"This game will give fans in another area of the state a chance to watch our team play," head coach Joe Cipriano said.
--	--

"Also, since we'll be playing our first two games in Lincoln that week anyway, it will give our team a chance to travel before our first regular game."
---	--

According to Ken Fischer, athletic director at Grand Island, the school and the town are very happy to host the game.
---	--

"Since our basketball team will just be starting practice, it will be good for the interest around here," he said.
--	--

"It will also give our fans an opportunity to view good, collegiate basketball."
--	--

Fischer said the game will be sponsored by the Grand Island High School Lettermen Club.

205 Complain Of Police In Omaha During 1975

Omaha (AP)—In the first 10 months of 1975, 205 persons in Omaha formally complained that they were mistreated or abused by police officers or that officers acted improperly in some way.

Since 1960, the Omaha police have had their own complaint department—a team of detectives who do nothing but police the police.

For three years, the Internal Security Unit has been headed by Lt. F.W. "Bud" Burchard, a tough, white-haired detective who says he likes his work, "but it damn sure isn't any cupcake."

Public Safety Director Richard Roth says of Burchard's dilemma in investigating his own chums: "We get feedback at city hall from policemen who feel that Internal Security bends over backward for the civilians who make complaints. And the civilians often believe just the opposite—that Internal Security makes things nice for the police."

Under the terms of the police union contract with the city, all civilian complaints lodged against police must be made in writing before an investigation can begin.

When such a complaint is signed, Burchard and two other investigators get to work interviewing the complainant, the officers involved and all possible witnesses.

Internal Security investigation reports, which average about 30 pages, are bound and presented to the police chief and safety director for action.

In all cases, citizens who make complaints are notified in writing of the investigation results.

An allegation against police can have for possible outcomes, Burchard said:

—Sustained. The incident occurred as charged and the officer was either partly or wholly in the wrong.

—Not sustained. It cannot be proven that the incident did or did not occur as charged.

—Exonerated. The situation did occur, but the officer was acting within the scope of his duties.

—Unfounded. It can be proven that the situation did not occur.

Of the 205 complaints thus far in 1975, 84 were not sustained, 30 were sustained; 4 were exonerated and 51 unfounded, Burchard said.

Disciplinary actions were taken against all officers involved in the 30 situations which were sustained, he said.

According to Sgt. Anderson Cousin, who recently joined Burchard's crew, "The police are investigated more thoroughly than the people they investigate."

Her teaching career began in rural schools in Texas before she married and moved to Lincoln in 1947.

Mrs. Anderson was a member of St. Paul United Methodist Church, Order of Eastern Star Chapter 834, the Zeta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, and Chapter K-PEO.

She is survived by her husband, Leroy; sisters, Mrs. A. V. Atkins and Mrs. Cleon Gorbett, both of Fort Worth; nephews, B. Ross Atkins of Beaumont, Tex., and Dr. Tom R. Reid of San Angelo, Tex.; and nieces, Mrs. Joe H. White and Mrs. Phillip W. Walker, both of Fort Worth.

205 Complaints Of Police In Omaha During 1975

Omaha (AP)—In the first 10 months of 1975, 205 persons in Omaha formally complained that they were mistreated or abused by police officers or that officers acted improperly in some way.

Since 1960, the Omaha police have had their own complaint department—a team of detectives who do nothing but police the police.

For three years, the Internal Security Unit has been headed by Lt. F.W. "Bud" Burchard, a tough, white-haired detective who says he likes his work, "but it damn sure isn't any cupcake."

Public Safety Director Richard Roth says of Burchard's dilemma in investigating his own chums: "We get feedback at city hall from policemen who feel that Internal Security bends over backward for the civilians who make complaints. And the civilians often believe just the opposite—that Internal Security makes things nice for the police."

Under the terms of the police union contract with the city, all civilian complaints lodged against police must be made in writing before an investigation can begin.

When such a complaint is signed, Burchard and two other investigators get to work interviewing the complainant, the officers involved and all possible witnesses.

Internal Security investigation reports, which average about 30 pages, are bound and presented to the police chief and safety director for action.

In all cases, citizens who make complaints are notified in writing of the investigation results.

An allegation against police can have for possible outcomes, Burchard said:

—Sustained. The incident occurred as charged and the officer was either partly or wholly in the wrong.

—Not sustained. It cannot be proven that the incident did not occur as charged.

—Exonerated. The situation did occur; but the officer was acting within the scope of his duties.

—Unfounded. It can be proven that the situation did not occur.

Of the 205 complaints thus far in 1975, 84 were not sustained, 30 were sustained; 4 were exonerated and 51 unfounded, Burchard said.

Disciplinary actions were taken against all officers involved in the 30 situations which were sustained, he said.

According to Sgt. Anderson Cousin, who recently joined Burchard's crew, "The police are investigated more thoroughly than the people they investigate."

Omaha Good Site For Museum

Omaha (AP) — Omaha is a good location for a major black history museum because of its central location, Betty Shabazz, widow of Omaha-born black nationalist Malcolm X, said Saturday.

Mrs. Shabazz was here to visit the site of the planned Great Plains Black Museum. She is a member of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, which has awarded a $101,000 grant for the museum.

Mrs. Shabazz said some blacks feel they should not take part in the bicentennial. But she said the museum "will show blacks what has happened and possible directions where they can go."

At a news conference, Mrs. Shabazz said the museum will be a good promotion for Nebraska because visitors would come from throughout the world and the nation.

A shrine at the birthsite of Malcolm X is planned in connection with the bicentennial, said Wilbur Phillips, Omaha attorney and member of the Omaha-Douglas County Bicentennial Commission.

Malcolm X was born Malcolm Little in Omaha in 1925.

Eugene Leahy, chairman of the local Bicentennial Commission, said "when people hear the name Malcolm X, they think of a revolutionary. However, his philosophy was really peace and love and generosity among all people."

In addition to the Bicentennial Administration grant, the museum project has been awarded $10,000 by the Nebraska Bicentennial Commission. The remaining $105,000 needed for the museum will be raised from donations, Leahy said.

Mrs. Shabazz said she was impressed by Nebraska's motto, "Equality Before the Law." It's a good theme for the bicentennial year, she said.

Uganda's Amin Angry At Soviet Union

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin, in an abrupt policy shift, threatened on Sunday to break off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union in 48 hours to protest Soviet intervention in the Angolan civil war.

A Radio Uganda broadcast said Amin objected to alleged attempts by Andrei Zakharov, Soviet ambassador to Uganda, to pressure Uganda into backing one of the Angolan factions aided by Moscow, and that Amin "is not a puppet and will not be dictated to."

A statement by Amin, reported by the government radio, demanded that Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev send a message with a high-ranking official within 48 hours explaining Soviet activities in Angola and Zakharov's behavior.

If the message is not sent before the deadline, or if it is carried by a low-ranking official, Uganda will give all Soviet diplomats and technical experts another two days to get out of the country, the radio said.

Amin's threats, although typical of his unpredictable approach to state affairs, represented an abrupt and unexpected shift in relations with the Soviet Union. The Soviets have supplied Uganda with warplanes and tanks, and Amin has thanked Moscow for its support of African and Arab revolutionary causes.

Several hundred Soviet diplomats, doctors and military training experts are believed to be in Uganda.

Zakharov informed Amin a week ago that the Soviet Union will recognize the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) as the sole ruler of Angola when the Portuguese colony becomes independent Tuesday. A Soviet note to Amin called on other African coun-

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Monday

ASTROLOGY brings me into contact with the high and the mighty and the low and the lonely. Through it all, I have found that persons with intellectual curiosity, individuals who are alert and alive, have a great interest in astrology. Conversely, those who are dead from the neck up, seem competent, willing to go along with "scientific authorities." One of my friends is a leading astronomer who, in public, attacks astrology. In private, he seems a "different" person.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on "joy of living." Some of your fondest hopes, wishes can be realities. A friend helps you with organizational or money dilemma. Cancer, Capricorn figure prominently. Money and business prospects are brighter than they might appear on surface.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pressure of added responsibility is evident. You get rid of notion that you "can't do it." Instead, you may be trying to do too much. Key now is confidence, special relationship with professional superior. Aries, Libra could be involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on communication, writing, publishing, effective use of language. Highlight independence, creativity. Your own style now is more important than "formal study methods." Refuse to be straitjacketed by tradition.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): You come to terms with others - and yourself. You also obtain "favorable terms." Means question marks about money, investments are removed. One close to you does have ideas which can be successfully utilized. Respond accordingly.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): One in advisory capacity may be confused. Know it and don't expect too much too soon. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in picture. Spotlight on legalities, partnership, ability to draw together those with opposing views.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Thorough approach brings best results, more so than in recent past. Be direct, specific, insist on quality and service. Others observe and evaluate. Know it and act accordingly. Keep promises regarding medical and dental care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with love, emotional responses, reaction to suggestions by young persons, changes, special reading material, ability to express, to give and receive. You get feedback about you. You are judged, analyzed, evaluated - and member of opposite sex is very much in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Chips are down where security is concerned. You decide whether to stay or go, whether to build or buy, whether to reinforce or abandon. Key is to do what promotes family harmony. Taurus, Libra could figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on relatives, short trips, quick suggestions, cold meals, ideas which need time to grow into valid concepts. You receive message which encourages, boosts morale, enables you to slip through maze of red tape.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Spotlight on balance, budget, locating lost articles, paying, collecting, organizing priorities, accepting more responsibility and garnering richer rewards. Relationship intensifies. You are asked to decide. Another Capricorn - and a Cancer figure in picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you make valuable contacts, act in more independent manner. Leo, Scorpio and Aquarius persons are due to play roles. Make new starts in new directions. Be a self-starter. Have confidence in judgment, intuition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your natural qualities, assets are emphasized. People feel they have "discovered" you. Your style is grabbed upon as "something timely, fresh, appealing." This applies in many levels, whether you are a professional entertainer or a dock worker.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, creative, "spoiled" by the opposite sex, used to having your own way. You are attractive, exciting, willing to take a chance on new concepts. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Emotional bruise will heal - you get chance for fresh start next month. A "big business" year is due in 1976.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name, if the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 6. If the number is less than 6, add 6. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
